INTRODUCTION TO JAMES MADISON COLLEGE

MISSION

James Madison provides a liberal education in public affairs for undergraduates. This means, among other things, that our primary activity as a faculty and staff is undergraduate teaching. We are dedicated to the highest standards of excellence, both for our students and for ourselves. Our curriculum and individual courses are multi-disciplinary, cultivating in our students skills of rigorous thought, lucid prose writing, and articulate speech. We learn in a residential setting that nurtures a collegium of scholars among students, faculty and staff and draw on the resources of the wider University to enrich our lives.

JAMES MADISON COLLEGE

There is something distinctive about James Madison College and its people. What we share, what brings us together, is a fascination with public affairs and problem solving. Students who enroll in the College approach undergraduate education with seriousness. They seek careers and decision-making roles in law, politics, government service, the Foreign Service, social services, journalism, education, business, and industry. We provide a challenging, multidisciplinary curriculum in the social sciences, which covers a range of subjects from social, political, and economic problems to questions of theory. Our curriculum is academically demanding, with distinctive attention to written work, analytical writing, give-and-take class discussion and collaborative work. Students in James Madison College confront special challenges and opportunities.

What makes us distinctive? For one, the College is small -- limited to about 1200 students. We are also a residential college, which means that Case Hall is required housing for all beginning students, and a popular housing option for returning sophomores, juniors, and seniors. In keeping with the purpose of a residential college, Madison also locates its administrative and faculty offices, classrooms, library, and seminar rooms in Case Hall. As a residential facility, Case Hall offers a library, computer lab, cafeteria, convenience store, laundry rooms, and assorted recreational facilities. It is a "home" on the MSU campus for our students, while also including students who are not enrolled in James Madison College. We provide an intimate environment in which to pursue an education -- one that features close contact with faculty and fellow students with similar academic interests and one that provides extended opportunities for debate and discussion outside the classroom.

Madison classes tend to be small. In our first-year courses, the average section size is about twenty. Our sophomore and junior courses enroll no more than forty students per section. Senior seminars are confined to fewer than twenty students. As a result, most classes are conducted as lively discussions in which students are encouraged and expected to participate. They draw insights from various social sciences and related fields, including political science, economics, literature, sociology, philosophy, and history. The faculty at Madison teaches. Our instructors are hired with the understanding that we place a high value on excellent teaching. Each of our tenure-track faculty members also serves as an academic advisor to students; this, too, is a practice that makes us special.

Our students take about half their course work in the College. The remainder is taken in other units at MSU (most commonly in the Colleges of Arts and Letters and Social Science, and in such departments as Economics, History, Communications, natural sciences, and foreign languages). As a result, they get the best of both worlds: the benefits of the Madison curriculum combined with the richness and diversity of Michigan State University.

ADMISSION INTO JAMES MADISON COLLEGE
Admission is open to any undergraduate (first-year or transfer student) who has been admitted into Michigan State University, including Honors College members, of whom there are many in Madison. Students must indicate the College as their "major preference" on the MSU application for admission using Madison's major code (2901). If a student is interested in Madison but has already applied to the University for another major, the student should immediately contact the MSU Office of Admissions (517-355-8332) to indicate that he or she would like to change his/her major to James Madison College. The Office of Admissions will evaluate each application according to the standard MSU admissions criteria; there are no separate or additional admissions requirements for Madison. However, students should know that James Madison College is a limited enrollment College and admission is on a space-available basis. Students admitted after the College reaches capacity for its first-year students will be placed on a waiting list. We recommend strongly that high school seniors apply as early as possible.

VISITING MADISON

We strongly encourage visits from all prospective students and parents. Students are welcome to sit in on a class, talk with our faculty and staff, visit with our students, and tour Case Hall. During the academic year students may arrange to observe a class during their visit. Student visits should be arranged in advance by telephoning the James Madison College Office at (517) 353-5260 during normal office hours.

BEYOND JAMES MADISON COLLEGE

Bred from a growing movement to provide the benefits of education to rural areas, Michigan State University was founded in 1855 as the nation’s pioneer land-grant institution. Michigan State University continues to stay true to the original land-grant promise by providing educational opportunities to students with diverse interests, abilities, and backgrounds. MSU is dedicated to intellectual leadership, academic excellence, and service to the community, state, nation, and world. The university has created an academically challenging, enriching, and invigorating atmosphere in which internationally recognized scholars and researchers guide students in their academic pursuits. Michigan State University has provided and continues to provide the necessary training for citizens of the emerging international system.

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY – INSTITUTIONAL LEARNING GOALS

A liberal arts foundation enhances the potential that MSU graduates will be outstanding leaders and life-long learners. These institutional learning goals are intended to provide a framework for students’ active engagement in learning both in and out of the classroom. Students who complete an undergraduate degree program at Michigan State University will demonstrate the knowledge, attitudes and skills associated with the following interconnected goals and outcomes:
Analytical Thinking
The MSU graduate uses ways of knowing from mathematics, natural sciences, social sciences, humanities, and arts to access information and critically analyzes complex material in order to evaluate evidence, construct reasoned arguments, and communicate inferences and conclusions.
- Acquires, analyzes, and evaluates information from multiple sources
- Synthesizes and applies the information within and across disciplines
- Identifies and applies, as appropriate, quantitative methods for defining and responding to problems
- Identifies the credibility, use and misuse of scientific, humanistic and artistic methods

Cultural Understanding
The MSU graduate comprehends global and cultural diversity within historical, artistic, and societal contexts.
- Reflects on experiences with diversity to demonstrate knowledge and sensitivity
- Demonstrates awareness of how diversity emerges within and across cultures

Effective Citizenship
The MSU graduate participates as a member of local, national, and global communities and has the capacity to lead in an increasingly interdependent world.
- Understands the structures of local, national, and global governance systems and acts effectively within those structures in both individual and collaborative ways
- Applies knowledge and abilities to solve societal problems in ethical ways

Effective Communication
The MSU graduate uses a variety of media to communicate effectively with diverse audiences.
- Identifies how contexts affect communication strategies and practices
- Engages in effective communication practices in a variety of situations and with a variety of media

Integrated Reasoning
The MSU graduate integrates discipline-based knowledge to make informed decisions that reflect humane social, ethical, and aesthetic values.
- Critically applies liberal arts knowledge in disciplinary contexts and disciplinary knowledge in liberal arts contexts
- Uses a variety of inquiry strategies incorporating multiple views to make value judgments, solve problems, answer questions, and generate new understandings

RESIDENTIAL LIFE: WHAT TO EXPECT
As a residential College, Madison encourages an environment where students can continue to learn and grow beyond the classroom. Madison provides a host of activities that relate to students’ common readings, courses and career interests. Students can expect hallways filled with lively debate well after classes have ended for the day, and frequent guest speakers, career nights, panel discussions, and non-academic socializing. Recent and on-going opportunities include:

Madhouse  - a coffeehouse atmosphere where students and faculty share talents and friendship.

Law School Night  - this has included alumni who have “been there,” offering advice and, dispensing vital information about admissions and financial aid.

These are only a two of Madison’s student and faculty-sponsored efforts to promote a true “living/learning” environment.

Additionally, the Residence Life staff offer a variety of activities to enrich student leaning. While these programs have a social and fun nature they also contain elements of character development, multiculturalism, personal wellbeing, community responsibility, and academic success.
By its nature, James Madison College also attracts students who are active, seeking participation in extra-curricular activities and opportunities for leadership. Following are just a few activities and programs popular among Madisonians.

JMC Student Senate

The James Madison College Student Senate was founded in 1993 by Madison students and faculty to serve as the official voice of students within the College. The Senate advises the Dean and faculty on college issues; provides leadership opportunities to students; and sponsors extra- and co-curricular activities. Senators are elected from the four majors within the College and the first-year class. Seat numbers are determined by a direct proportion of students enrolled per major. All Madison students are voting members of the Senate and have voice and vote within their major caucus.

Elections for the Senate are held each spring; elections for First-year Senators are held each fall. For more information about the Student Senate, or for meeting times during the academic year, students should contact the Field Experience and Student Affairs Office.

Marathon Readings

In 2004, James Madison College staged its first Reading Marathon when more than 40 students and faculty gathered together to read Herman Melville’s classic novel Moby Dick. Beginning at 6:00 a.m. on a Saturday morning, the group took turns reading the entire 500 page novel aloud, and completed the book at 4:30 a.m. the following day—a total of more than 22 hours.

In the years since, the JMC Reading Marathon has become an annual event, sponsored by the college’s MADhouse group—a student group that fosters creative writing and an appreciation for literature through monthly readings. In 2005, the Marathon featured Salman Rushdie’s Midnight’s Children (read in two sessions totaling more than 30 hours), followed in 2006 by Walt Whitman’s epic Leaves of Grass (finished in a mere 8 hours). In 2007 the Marathon celebrated the 50th anniversary of Jack Kerouac’s novel On The Road with a reading that rolled on for 11 hours. As in years past, all those in attendance agreed that it had been a remarkable event, a great way to see the full sweep of a work of literature, and a fun way to build a sense of community within the college. In 2008 the group read Pride and Prejudice and in 2009 the reading was Crime and Punishment. For 2010 students and faculty joined together to read Kurt Vonnegut’s Slaughterhouse-Five. In 2013 students and faculty read One Hundred Years of Solitude, by Gabriel Garcia Marquez.

International Relations Organization and Model UN

There are several organizations for students interested in international relations. The International Relations Organization (IRO) is a registered student organization that coordinates on and off-campus Model United Nations activities. MSU’s Model UN organization coordinates the on-campus high school Model UN competition.
W.E.B. DuBois Society

The W.E.B. DuBois Society at James Madison College was created in 1998 to foster social-political, academic and cultural diversity. The society's mission is to strengthen and sustain the college's commitment to addressing the needs of all students and faculty, with particular emphasis on those of the minority population. The society is also committed to sustaining an environment that will encourage the recruitment of minority students, faculty, and staff. These collaborative efforts incorporate students, staff, faculty and alumni to encourage understanding and participation in college affairs.

Madison Ambassadors

The James Madison College Ambassadors consist of student volunteers who serve as ambassadors for the College. They assist the Madison Admissions Office by hosting prospective students and their parents, providing tours of Case Hall, and answering questions about academic and student life. They are also called upon to help host Madison's visit days in the fall, the two Alumni Distinguished Scholarship weekends in February, and other college-sponsored events. In addition, they help the College by telephoning students who have not visited campus and by going on-site occasionally to speak with groups of high school students and others about the College. Being a Madison Ambassador is an enjoyable way for students to get involved, and participation is open to students at all levels, first-year through senior. For more information about how to become a James Madison College Ambassador, contact the Coordinator of Recruitment at (517) 353-5260.

Additional Extra-Curricular Opportunities

As you can imagine, beyond these activities, Madison students have hundreds of outlets at MSU for their organizational and leadership abilities. The Associated Students of MSU (ASMSU) and the Senior Class Council are typically well represented by Madison students. The national-award winning MSU Debate Team is another group in which Madison students are highly visible. Madison students volunteer for a whole range of activities through MSU's Service Learning Center, from the Adopt a Grandparent organization to the Capitol Area Literacy Coalition. The range of possibilities is almost unlimited.

First Year Mentor Program

The purpose of the First Year Mentor Program is to ease the transition of first-year students into the academic and social culture of Madison by pairing them with an upper class student that acts as a role model and resource both in Madison and in the larger MSU community. The program hopes to bridge the gap between first-year students and upper class students by encouraging relationships between classes and utilizing the existing resources found in the JMC community to do so. The long-term goal is to promote the retention, academic success and student development of current students. Please send email to jmcdvrst@msu.edu for more information.
Madison Academic Diversity Initiative (MADI)

MADI is a new program that aims to support underrepresented students during their transition into James Madison College. MADI focuses on creating a more diverse and inclusive environment, by providing a support network for participating students in order to ensure their academic success.

Funded through the Creating Inclusive Excellence Grant from the MSU Office of Inclusion, MADI aims to serve as a social and academic support network for underrepresented students, which include: first generation college students, students with a low socio-economic background, students of color, international students, and/or those JMC students with a strong desire to connect with their peers in a meaningful way.

MADI offers professional development opportunities, academic support, social outings, topic focused community dinners once per month with local alumni, faculty and the Deans, mid-term study tables, community service projects, leadership opportunities within the college and a Diversity Leadership Retreat, all free of charge to you!

Space is limited for this amazing program! For more information email jmcdvrst@msu.edu.

MADISON SUPPORT SERVICES

Academic Advising

All students in James Madison College have an academic advisor in the college. The College's staff advisors usually advise first-year students. Upper level students are usually advised by faculty members who teach in the Madison majors.

Academic advisors can help students think about long-term goals, as well as short-term course selections. In order to make the most of the advising relationship, students need to spend time getting to know their advisors. Waiting until the annual enrollment period and then making a single visit to pick classes is not very fruitful for either the student or the advisor. Academic advising is very individualized at Madison; we regard it as one of our most important responsibilities to students.

The Madison Writing Consultancy

The first and only unit-level satellite writing center on campus, the Madison Writing Consultancy weaves the philosophy of the MSU Writing Center into the specific needs of JMC to provide writing support to all students free of charge. Experienced peer consultants, themselves upper-division Madison students familiar with the college’s curriculum, are available to consult with students of any level on any assignment at any stage of composition – brainstorming, drafting, revising. In addition to one-on-one consulting, Madison consultants host a variety of workshops and classroom presentations, such as “Reading a Complicated Text,” “Writing in the Major,” and “How to Peer Review,” to help Madisonians gain a better understanding of reading and writing in the social sciences. Finally the Madison Consultants work closely with the MSU Writing Center to provide technology consulting to students interested in using email, Internet research, or web page publishing.
JMADISON Listserv

Madison students will begin receiving information regarding the College from “JMADISON.” If you would like to post a note on the “JMADISON” listserv please send that information directly to JMADISON@msu.edu.

Career Advising

All students in the College have access to the Field Career Consultant (FCC). The FCC is on site to assist you with resume and cover letter construction, career, graduate and law school exploration and application, networking, internship and employment search strategies, alumni contacts, and all other post-graduation activities. The FCC also holds programming and workshops aimed at developing career interests and to assist students in marketing your skills and experience to prospective internship, employment and educational sites. Please contact the Madison Office of Career Services located in 328 Case Hall for more information.

CASE HALL SUPPORT SERVICES

Case Hall Black Caucus

Case Hall Black Caucus welcomes all residents of Case Hall regardless of race, sex, religious or ethnic background, who seek to learn and spread knowledge of African-American culture and history.

Case Hall Government

Case Hall Government promotes scholastic, athletic and social interests of the residents of Case Hall. Interested students should contact their Resident Assistants or the Case Hall Complex Director.

Case Hall Facilities

The home of James Madison College on the MSU campus is Case Residence Hall, the first of the coeducational living-learning centers at MSU and one of the first in the nation. Included in Case Hall are a library, a music room, a dining hall, a convenience store, a seminar room, a computer laboratory, classrooms, recreation rooms and lounges, faculty offices, College offices, , and student residences. Because of this living, teaching, and administrative facility, Madison is able to offer a “small-college” environment that features closer student-faculty contact, inside and outside the classroom.

Case Hall offers a variety of living options to accommodate a range of life styles. These include alternate wing arrangements (i.e., a wing of women situated next to a wing of men), quiet floors, and female-male alternating suite floors. The living arrangement consists of suites of two rooms joined by a connecting bath. There are normally two people to a room.
LIFE AFTER MADISON

The Madison curriculum, with its multi-disciplinary perspective and focus on applied social science, prepares students to face real world challenges with maturity, creativity and responsibility. Increasingly, employers are looking for students that have strong communication skills, can think critically, are able to solve problems, effectively manage their time and priorities, can work as a member of a team, and are open to learning and acquiring new knowledge. The Madison curriculum develops these skills, and the Field Experience requirement adds a practical experience that complements the classroom education. Many Madison graduates elect to seek full-time positions immediately upon graduation, while others seek to further their education in Master of Arts, PhD, J.D. (Law School), Master of Business Administration, Master of Social Work and other professional degree programs.

Employment Paths

Madison’s reputation has been built both inside the classroom as well as out in the “Real World”. We’ve talked about the strength and depth of the Madison curriculum, which, when combined with the practical Field Experience requirement prepares students for success. In addition, Madison graduates and interns have established the College’s strong reputation among employers. Consequently, the College’s name garners considerable respect. Across Michigan, throughout the Midwest, and increasingly, throughout the country and world, new graduates find many employment opportunities available to them based on previous contact by employers with Madison students and graduates.

Following is a list of some employment paths recent Madison graduates have taken:

- Analyst, Government Accountability Office
- Second Lieutenant, US Air Force Intelligence
- Kindergarten Teacher, Denia School (Thailand)
- Policy intern, the Nature Conservancy of Michigan
- Legislative Director, MI House of Representatives
- Learning Coordinator, City Year Chicago

Graduate School

James Madison College provides a strong liberal arts foundation, develops strong verbal, written, and analytical skills, and focuses on government and public affairs, which makes it a popular program for students interested in graduate or law school. The rigorous demands and multi-disciplinary method of instruction in each of the majors at the College prepare students for graduate study in a wide variety of areas. Programs in Law, Political Science, History, Sociology, Labor and Industrial Relations, Business Administration, Economics, and International Relations hold Madison in high regard and look favorably upon students who have done well in the curriculum. Many students continue in the same direction as their Madison major, while other students tackle areas of study markedly different from their undergraduate degrees. Madison students have gone on to graduate programs in Russian Literature, Medicine, Physics, Art History, Journalism, Public Health, Theatre, Resource Development, Urban Design and Architecture, besides programs in International Relations, Business and Economics, Sociology, Law, and Political Science.
JAMES MADISON COLLEGE CURRICULUM

OVERVIEW

Michigan State University and James Madison College are on the semester calendar. The JAMES MADISON COLLEGE overall curriculum is made up of University requirements, College requirements including the major, and Field Experience requirements and Electives, as described below. Most students complete about 30 credits per year. About half of these credits are taken in Madison classes taught by Madison faculty. The remainder of the course work comes from a variety of other colleges and departments on campus.

Academic Orientation

Most students entering their first year or transferring to Michigan State University begin planning their Madison studies at Academic Orientation, a two-day program that takes place in the summer or prior to the semester of matriculation. As part of the Academic Orientation Program, students meet with members of the James Madison College staff and student body. Madison staff will talk with students about their academic interests and work closely with them to help them select their classes for the coming year. When students finish the Academic Orientation Program (AOP), they will have a completed schedule. They will know exactly what courses they will be taking and where and when those classes will be meeting. The personal attention that students receive is important, because first-year students at MSU have considerable choices.

First Year

In their first year, students will take two Madison courses per semester: MC111-112, “Identity and Community: An Approach to Writing,” and MC201-202, “Introduction to the Study of Public Affairs.” The other classes students take during the first year are drawn from outside Madison. Some possibilities students might consider include foreign languages, economics, mathematics, history, literature, philosophy, psychology, sociology, and computer science.

We recommend that students begin their foreign language during their first year. MSU has a wide array of language offerings -- Arabic, Chinese, French, German, Hebrew, Italian, Japanese, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish, and Swahili, among others. It also has excellent language laboratory facilities. If students place into the third year level of a foreign language, they should consider continuing with it or beginning a second foreign language.

Students may want to make additional progress towards meeting the University Integrative Studies requirements. Because the required Madison courses meet the University requirements in two of the four areas, Tier I Writing and Social Science, students may postpone completing the remaining two areas (General Science and Arts and Humanities) until their sophomore year. Students should remember that Madison staff and faculty will help them choose classes by explaining the various options. Students should think of their first year as an opportunity to be introduced to Madison as well as to sample courses in the wider University.

Toward the end of their first year in Madison, students are asked to indicate the major they plan to pursue. These are the four majors:

- INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS
- COMPARATIVE CULTURES AND POLITICS
- POLITICAL THEORY AND CONSTITUTIONAL DEMOCRACY
- SOCIAL RELATIONS AND POLICY

Before deciding, students will have the opportunity to attend "Meet the Majors" meetings, to learn about each major, its requirements, its faculty, and possible careers. After students make their decision, they will be assigned an academic advisor. If students request a particular advisor, the College will do its best to accommodate them. At this point, students may also want to consider a "dual major," or studying across TWO majors.

Sophomore Year

During the sophomore year, Madison classes will build upon the analytical, writing, and verbal skills that students started to develop during their first year. These classes will also expose students to the major theoretical approaches and policy issues and concerns of their major, and teach them to think like problem solvers and make use of ideas from a variety of social science disciplines. Most students complete the college economics requirement as well as finish their University integrative studies in this year.

Junior and Senior Year

During the junior and senior years, students pursue advanced course work in their James Madison College major and fulfill the related area or disciplinary course requirements of their major. Students also complete the FIELD EXPERIENCE requirement. Finally, they can also look forward to taking a SENIOR SEMINAR in their major. Our Senior Seminars are intended to be capstone experiences -- opportunities for students to pull together and reflect upon what they have learned in their Madison classes and to employ the skills they have mastered. These seminars are also research seminars, in which students will participate in creating and sharing knowledge. The seminars are small (about 15-20 students) and are focused on advanced topics of interest to faculty and students in the major.

The JAMES MADISON COLLEGE overall curriculum is made up of University requirements, College requirements (MC), major requirements, Field Experience, and Electives as described below.

Students must complete a minimum of 51 credits in Madison (MC) courses. However, students transferring to Madison from another MSU major or from another college or university must complete a minimum of 41 MC credits. Those students enrolled in a teaching certification program and fulfilling a student teaching requirement must also complete 41 MC credits, as a minimum.
CURRICULAR REQUIREMENTS

UNIVERSITY REQUIREMENTS:

1. Writing & Integrative Studies:
   Like other students at MSU, a part of the first and second year is spent fulfilling the University's Integrative Studies requirements. These requirements represent four areas: a) Writing; b) General Science; c) Arts and Humanities; and d) Social Science. Madison's First-year program satisfies the University's Social Science and Tier I Writing requirements. The Integrative Studies requirements in General Science and in the Arts & Humanities are met by completing two approved courses in each of these two areas. The Integrative Arts requirement must include one course denoted with a (D) for domestic and one denoted with an (I) for International. One of the Science courses must have a concurrent lab. MSU has a wide selection of courses that will meet these requirements. In addition to these four areas, students must complete a Tier II Writing requirement. Madison students fulfill the Tier II writing requirement in the normal process of completing their majors (i.e., students will not need to take any additional classes to meet this requirement).

2. Math Requirement:
   Successful completion of this requirement can be accomplished in one of two ways:

   A. A placement examination score of 19 or higher in a proctored setting, which demonstrates competency equivalent to the following: two years of high school algebra; one year of high school geometry; and one year of probability, trigonometry, or calculus.

   B. Completion at MSU or transfer equivalent of one of the following: MTH 103 & 114 together, 112, 110, 116, 124, 132, 152H; STT 200, 201.

COLLEGE REQUIREMENTS:

1. The First Year Program: 16 cr.
   The first year at Madison features our Identity and Community and Introduction to Public Affairs courses. These courses fulfill the University's Tier I writing and integrative social science requirements.

MC 111-112: Identity and Community: An Approach to Writing
MC 111-112 is James Madison's version of the University's writing requirement. A two-semester sequence of writing-intensive seminars, MC 111-112 introduces students to significant questions and problems in the humanities, drawing primarily on humanities-based texts such as novels, autobiographies, histories, essays, and films. While each seminar is concerned with the overarching theme of identity and community, individual sections pursue this theme in a variety of historical, cultural, and intellectual contexts. Regardless of its specific focus, each course fosters habits of mind essential to a liberal education: (1) the ability to read complex texts insightfully and critically; (2) the ability to articulate ideas effectively in writing and in speech; (3) an appreciation for the complexity and diversity of the human experience as expressed in a variety of imaginative literatures and related texts; and (4) the capacity for deepened self-reflection.

MC 111: Identity and Community: An Approach to Writing I
MC 111 introduces students to issues of identity and community in American and/or international contexts. Among the questions individual sections of MC 111 might address are: What factors shape identity? How does one define community and what rights and responsibilities accompany membership in various communities? How do notions of identity and community differ across cultures? How have writers from a variety of communities articulated their identities in literature? How do imaginative literatures, histories, and other cultural texts (like film) represent individual, collective, civic, and national identities?

Writing assignments in MC 111 typically include: personal essays, narratives, or analytical autobiographies; analytical or interpretive essays requiring close textual analysis; synthesis essays in which several texts are analyzed in relation to each other; and/or critiques of primary and secondary texts. The emphasis in the first semester is on (1) developing an effective writing process by drafting, revising, critiquing, and editing essays as part of a community of writers; (2) honing the reading, writing, critical thinking and discussion skills necessary to participate meaningfully in an intellectual community.

MC 112: Identity and Community: An Approach to Writing II focuses on particular periods of social change in American history (e.g., the Civil War, the 1920s, the Great Depression, or the 1960s) or on themes of transition and change in international or cross-cultural contexts. Among the questions individual sections might address are: What are the causes and impacts of social, political, economic, and cultural upheaval? How do individuals and groups of people react to moments of stress and transition? How do literary and other artistic forms of expression represent cultural transitions and/or cross-cultural encounters?

Writing assignments in MC 112 may include the types of analytical and narrative writing required in MC 111, but the emphasis in the second semester is on learning the research process. In MC 112, students undertake original research incorporating primary and secondary texts. A series of shorter assignments takes students through the process of formulating research questions, finding appropriate sources in (and outside of) a large, research library, preparing research proposals and annotated bibliographies, and writing an analytical essay based on extensive research. MC 112 also emphasizes public speaking skills; class assignments typically include speeches, interviews, and creative presentations.

MC 201-202: Introduction to the Study of Public Affairs

The first year of Madison also features our introductory course in the social sciences (MC 201-202: Introduction to the Study of Public Affairs), the College's equivalent of the University's Integrative Studies in Social Science requirement. The goals of the course are (1) to introduce students to the social sciences and to several enduring themes and issues in public affairs in the context of a broad liberal arts education, and (2) to provide a foundation for upper division study in the College. By "foundation," we mean substantive knowledge, analytical thinking, research and writing skills, and experience with multidisciplinary study.

MC 201-202 is a two-semester sequence focusing on the social sciences. During the first semester (MC 201), students explore key features of United States polity and society in historical and comparative perspective. The course introduces students to some of the political, economic, and social dimensions of American civilization, and how they shape our approach to public affairs. More specifically, the course considers the enduring tensions in the United States’ being a liberal democratic political community, a mixed capitalist economy, and a diverse society. Readings include a range of perspectives from history, economics, political science, political theory and sociology. Written assignments may include analytical or comparative essays, short research papers, and critical reviews. Students are encouraged to link their explorations of identity and community in MC 111 with discussion of the American community and public life in MC 201.

During the second semester (MC 202), students focus on selected issues in American and international public affairs, particularly as these are reflected in contemporary public debates. For example, one major theme in MC 202 has been nationalism and identity, which can include questions such as: Why are there growing national and ethnic conflicts in a changing post-war world? What are the relationships among membership, identity, nationalism, and ethnic and national conflicts? In MC 202, students' writing assignments may include preparing analytical essays, position papers and memoranda, and sustained research papers. Oral tasks may include presentations, debates, and simulations. Students are encouraged to expand their research skills, sharpen their judgment, and speak their views publicly.

MC 201-202 is taught by a team of Madison faculty. Many Madison faculty participate as lecturers in the course, and some guest lecturers come also from outside the College. MC 201-202 also includes occasional films, videos, panel discussions, special co-curricular events, and faculty or student debates. MC 201-202 meets weekly for group lectures or common experiences, then in a small discussions. The seminars provide opportunities for students to discuss the readings and lectures, ask questions, and engage in conversation. Expectations are high for broad student participation.

2. Minimum MC Credit Requirements: 51/41
Students must complete a minimum of 51 credits in Madison (MC) courses. However, students transferring to Madison from another MSU major or from another college or university must complete a minimum of 41 MC credits. Those students enrolled in a teaching certification program and fulfilling a student teaching requirement must also complete 41 MC credits, as a minimum.

3. The Economics Requirement: 6/7 cr.

All Madison students take microeconomics and macroeconomics (EC 201 or 251H and EC 202 or 252H) to provide background knowledge for their upper-division Madison courses. The economics requirement is an essential part of a liberal arts education that focuses on public affairs.

4. The Language Requirement: up to 16 cr.

To broaden the cultural, humanities, and analytical competencies of students and prepare them to become global citizens, James Madison College requires that all students attain second year university level competency in a foreign language. Students may do this by taking courses in a foreign language for two years at MSU or at another university. Students may be able to waive some or all of the university level foreign language courses depending on their scores on the MSU placement or Advanced Placement test. Please note that first year-level Russian, Japanese, Chinese, Arabic and African languages may be taken Credit/No credit. Students must decide in the first week of classes whether they will take a course Credit/No Credit and must go to the Registrar's Office to request the Credit/No Credit status.
5. The Field Experience: 12 cr.

A Madison education focuses on the application of knowledge and analysis to public issues, concerns and events, as well as on theoretical approaches to social science. As a result, Madison students learn to think critically and analytically about public affairs, to evaluate policy options, and to understand decision-making. Madison believes that a liberal education is incomplete without a chance to test and apply these abilities in professional settings.

During either the junior or senior year, at least one semester is spent in an internship with an agency, organization, business, or legislative office, instead of in the classroom. The College believes that it is important that our students spend at least three months interning in an organization and a position that interests them and gives them a chance to apply what they have learned in the classroom to the policy world. Apparently, employers think so too (see the “Employment Paths” section of this booklet.) Many of our graduates have developed excellent job contacts through the organizations in which they interned.

Field experience is a requirement for all Madison students. It consists of two courses taken concurrently - MC 400 (9 credits, pass/no pass) and MC 401 (3 credits, pass/no pass). During the sophomore and junior years, students should explore the more than 600 placements on file in the Field Experience Office. These placements include assignments with a variety of state and federal agencies, city governments, legislative offices, public interest groups, legal aid societies, courts, social service agencies, businesses, newspapers, labor unions, and voluntary organizations. We have placements throughout the U.S. and abroad. The placements we approve aim to place Madison students in a decision-making role or close enough to it so that they may comment on it intelligently. This means that the work they do must be substantial and serious. With the Field Experience Director’s approval, students may develop their own internship. Students must meet with the Field Experience Director prior to beginning internship applications, preferably two full semesters prior to the semester of the internship.

Students may, with advisor approval, petition to substitute one of four options for MC400 and/or MC401: a senior honors thesis; prior professional or public affairs-related work experience relevant to the Madison program; a student teaching dual major - TE 401 (5 cr.) and TE 402 (6 cr.) - or a dual major practicum; or an approved study abroad program. Students considering substitutions for the Field Experience or part-time experiences should remember that they need to complete a minimum of 51 MC credits, or 41 credits if they are transfer students (either internal or external) or if they will be doing the MSU Teacher Certification Program.

MAJOR REQUIREMENTS: 39-46 cr.

Each of our four majors are built around a core of Madison classes that extend from the sophomore through senior years. This is supplemented by another group of related courses that will be mostly drawn from other majors in Madison or from other MSU departments, especially those in the Colleges of Arts and Letters and Social Science. This mix of Madison and non-Madison classes is the centerpiece of the educational experience.

Madison's majors are designed to accommodate dual majors. Students can graduate in the normal amount of time even if they choose to pursue two of Madison's majors. It is best if this decision is made early in the sophomore year, but choosing this option even later is still manageable. Students are strongly recommended to consult their advisor or the Assistant Dean as they make this decision.

It is not unusual for students to be uncertain as to the major they wish to study. Students should keep in mind that the choice is not etched in stone; it is possible to change the major declaration or to take more time to decide without “falling behind.” Choosing a major is a process. Through the first year, students will want to get to know Madison faculty and fellow students; talk with their advisor; read carefully the sections on the majors in this handbook, and, as mentioned earlier, attend the "Meet the Majors" meetings held by each major during spring semester your first year. Each of our majors offers a liberal arts education and solid preparation for a wide range of opportunities after graduation.
ELECTIVES

Electives are courses that are chosen by the students to satisfy additional interests that they may have. Courses may be drawn from almost anywhere in the University. Students often use some of these electives to begin a second foreign language, take additional coursework in Madison, take courses in other MSU departments, or work on one of the many specializations offered at MSU, including ones on Africa, Asia, Canada, Latin America and the Caribbean, Russia, Europe, Jewish Studies, International Development, Women's Studies, African-American History & Culture, or Health and Humanities.

BUSINESS COGNATE

Students may elect to complete a cognate in business. The requirements for the cognate are met by completing:

MC 241 Politics and Markets and four of the following courses (12 credits):

ACC 230 Survey of Accounting Concepts
FI 320 Introduction to Finance
GBL 323 Introduction to Business Law
MGT 325 Management Skills and Processes
MKT 327 Introduction to Marketing

Students may substitute ACC 201 and 202 for ACC 230.
COMPARATIVE CULTURES AND POLITICS

Madison’s newest major, Comparative Cultures and Politics, addresses one of the most significant challenges facing public and international affairs specialists in the 21st century: the need to understand the complex relationships between international affairs and culture. Comparative Cultures and Politics provides a real innovation in undergraduate education—approaching the study of culture and politics through systematic interdisciplinary study across the social sciences and humanities. It takes up such questions as: What is “culture”? What is the role of culture in contemporary politics across the world? What is the impact of globalization on cultural identities and inter-cultural relations? How do different societies — and different groups within societies – understand and articulate cultural identities and diversities? How and when do cultural representations and practices become politically salient? The curriculum is explicitly comparative, examining the dynamic of politics and cultures within specific political regimes. But students also learn that cultures do not exist as isolated, autonomous entities; they bump up against one another and transform each other, and transnational institutions, actors and processes affect cross-cultural interactions. CCP aims to advance new ways of seeing and analyzing culture and politics across the world and equip students to make substantial contributions to international affairs, public policy and public life.

The CCP major offers a sophomore sequence of courses introducing the study of culture and politics in comparative and transnational perspective, as well as electives in the areas of Comparative Studies (courses such as Romancing the Nation or State and Society in Comparative Perspective) and Transnational Studies (courses such as Culture, Politics, Post-Colonialism or Islam and World Politics) and a capstone seminar. Students also select three related area courses to gain greater depth in particular regions or aspects of cultural politics.

Requirements for a major in Comparative Cultures and Politics:

All of the following core courses (13 Credits):

MC 230: Cultures and Politics in Comparative Perspective
MC 231: Cultures and Politics in Transnational Perspective
MC 493: Senior Seminar in Comparative Cultures and Politics

Four (4) of the following selected in consultation with an advisor (16 Credits):
– At least one (1) course must come from each category

Comparative Studies --
MC 320: Politics, Society and Economy in the Third World
MC 325: State and Society in Comparative Perspective
MC 331: Encounters with Post-Communism

Examples of Senior Seminars (MC 493)

Displacement, Politics and the Visual Field One of the most pressing issues in the world today is the involuntary movement of people, of ‘displaced persons’. Whether wrought by natural disasters, such as the tsunamis or earthquakes, by war or ethnic conflicts, or by policies towards urbanization or development, displacement is often linked to human suffering, and always connected to national and transnational geopolitics. Not surprisingly, scholars in a wide range of fields have noted the importance of ‘seeing’ displacement: they recognize that visual images and narratives not only elicit emotional responses from a general populace, but that the production and circulation of such images and narratives are inextricably linked to policies and actions taken within the global arena. As such, these scholars challenge us to understand the constitutive relations of geopolitics and visuality differently; to understand it not only as the social construction of the visual field but as the visual performance of the social field (Campbell, 2007; 357). This section of MC 493 examines the ways in which displacement and ‘displaced’ persons—material bodies and subjectivities—are constructed, circulated, and regulated in and across the social field. To this end, we will ask questions such as: What is ‘displacement’? How is displacement constituted materially and discursively? What are the dominant technologies (or modes) employed in producing knowledge about displacement? Who has access to such technologies? Can displaced groups engage in this production? Here contemporary cases might include the movement of people internally and across borders as prompted by conflict or environmental issues. Cases will be concerned with multi-dimensionality of experiences of displacement (e.g. human security). In exploring these questions, we will draw from a range of fields, including anthropology, political philosophy, cultural geography, and visual studies; and, across a range of genres, such as policies papers, ethnographies, and documentary film. Most importantly, students will draw on their areas of expertise beyond CCP (e.g. specializations) to construct theoretical or practical models to address issues of displacement and displaced bodies.

Television, Televisuality and Global Events Television impacts the ways in which we see the world: our understanding of and experiencing of the nation, of places, of ‘others’, of the global, of history. It is inextricable from such global events as the Tiananmen Square protests of 1989, the fall of communism, the Kosovo crisis, the Iraq war. In this seminar, we will grapple with key and competing perspectives on the complex role of television and televisuality in such global events (i.e. movements of protest and wars). Along the way, we will familiarize ourselves with critical work on the politics of televisual representation, on geographies of visibility in American television news, and on how we are implicated as viewers in global events. As this is a capstone experience in comparative cultures and politics, our intellectual journey will be an interdisciplinary one, and we will draw on readings from a range of disciplinary perspectives. As in all capstone experiences, student participation is a crucial dimension of this seminar, and student research will complement our common readings and case studies.

Ethnic Conflicts MC 493 serves as the capstone seminar for CCP majors. Our focus in this section will be one of the world's most urgent and dangerous problems -- ethnic conflict. Why is it that some multiethnic and multicultural societies and states manage to be free of violent conflict, while others have fallen victim to protracted conflict or intense, violent conflict? What are the political and cultural dynamics that produce conflict? When and how does ethnicity interplay with other identities and interests to cause conflict? How might ethnic conflicts be managed or resolved? We will examine theoretical and conceptual literature on ethnic conflict, and we will ground this theoretical study with exploration of empirical case studies. Possible cases include Bosnia, Kashmir, the Kurds, Northern Ireland, Rwanda, and/or Sri Lanka. Student research is an important part of this class, as your work will be integrated into the course through readings and presentations.
COMPARATIVE CULTURES AND POLITICS

Below is a checklist for students in the Comparative Cultures and Politics major who began in CCP Fall 2013 or after. Transfer students who are still taking courses at other institutions should choose classes that may be applied toward MSU's Integrative Studies requirements, such as MSU’s math requirement, if necessary, or Madison’s foreign language and economics requirements.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Madison's major in International Relations trains students to think imaginatively, and in depth, about the problems of world society and about the opportunities for solving them. By design, it is a sophisticated program: its graduates have gone on to careers in the foreign service, politics, international organizations, academics, law (including international law), public relations, lobbying, economic development work, intelligence gathering and analysis, the news media, and international business. It is also, of course, an excellent preparation for law school and for graduate study in international affairs or international business.

The outstanding features of the curriculum are its breadth and depth. It is organized around the following themes: international security and conflict resolution; international political economy; global governance; foreign policy of the United States and other countries; and comparative, regional and cultural studies.

The International Relations curriculum encourages students to think creatively about a variety of issues: What constitutes "national security"? What are the social consequences of modernization? What are the causes and likely consequences of ethno-nationalism? How does the U.S. arrive at foreign policy decisions? How is it different from how foreign policies are made in other countries and which is better? What is the impact of protectionist foreign trade policies? How do national, regional and international political, social, and economic actors interact in the transition to a post-cold war global order? What is the impact of the U.N. and other international organizations? What effects do weapons and communications technologies have on world politics? By what means have national defense policies been implemented since the end of World War II. Some classes will use case studies in which students will be examining real or hypothetical foreign policy dilemmas and developing solutions to them. Others will evidence the importance of theories and models for comprehending and influencing world events.

Requirements for a major in International Relations:

All of the Following Courses (13 credits):

Examples of Senior Seminars (MC 492)

Sustainable Development and Policy: International and Domestic Case Studies: Sustainable development, for some, is a new paradigm for economic development, a refuge from the hegemony of markets and neoliberalism, and a recognition of the strong ties between socioeconomic and natural systems. For others, sustainable development is nothing more than pie-in-the-sky eco-utopianism, a misguided and ill-defined venture which only serves to derail economic and therefore environmental progress. In this seminar, we will explore the competing claims, politics and policies of sustainable development. We will begin with theoretical framings of sustainable development and then transition to more real-world applications motivated by a series of case studies from developing and developed nations.

Globalization and Regional Governance: East Asia and Beyond: The central purpose of this seminar is to explore the relationship between global and regional dynamics, with particular emphasis on East Asia. In the first part of the seminar, we will explore the debate about globalization: How do we define globalization? What are its causes and consequences? In the second part of the seminar, we will study the impact of globalization on East Asia’s political, economic, and social development, focusing on the following countries/areas: Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, and China. In the third part of the seminar, we will examine the changing dynamics of the East Asian regional economy in the context of globalization. In particular, we will discuss such salient issues as the impact of the 1997-98 Asian financial crisis, the rise of East Asian regionalism, and China’s growing integration into the global economy.

Culture, Conflict and Conflict Resolution: This seminar builds from students’ previous coursework in international relations to develop a deeper understanding of why conflict occurs and how it might be overcome. It looks specifically at cultural clashes, exploring the mechanisms of conflictual interaction, means to manage conflict as well as transformative possibilities for peacebuilding. In addition to overviewing some key theoretical approaches to conflict and its resolution, the course will take up cases of contemporary conflict, including the most seemingly intractable (e.g., Sri Lanka or Kashmir) and those seemingly on a path of transformation (e.g., Northern Ireland). Student research will round out the course, providing insights into additional cases and illuminating the uses and limitations of current theories in the field.

U.S. National Security: This seminar will focus on the development and application of U.S. national security policy throughout U.S. history. It will consider the continuities and changes that have occurred based on the evolution of America’s capabilities, interests, and position in a world that has changed dramatically over the last 200 years. While briefly examining America’s rise to power, we will spend a fair amount of time considering the development and evolution of America’s Cold War national security strategy. We will then examine the changes that have occurred since the end of the Cold War and after 9/11. We will also examine how America’s national security institutional infrastructure has been adapted over time to meet new conceptions of threat. Throughout the course, we will focus on the interaction between the development of strategic visions, the development and execution of policy options, and the process of national security policy making. Students will be expected to participate actively in class and prepare a significant research paper, among other assignments (paper drafts, presentation, exams, etc.).
INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

James Madison College’s major in Political Theory and Constitutional Democracy, as its unusual name suggests, probes the major competing principles that have animated political communities and how we have attempted to translate these into practice. We raise complex fundamental questions as we try to sort out the values and principles that have been most important to us. What does it mean to flourish as a human being? What are the rights and responsibilities of good citizens? What is the best way of life for society as a whole? Political Theory does not pretend to have the definitive answers to these questions. But we believe we can teach students how to think about these concepts and how to approach these questions in a productive and intellectually exciting way.

To achieve this, the Political Theory and Constitutional Democracy curriculum is both philosophical and historical. Course readings range from Plato and the classical poets to contemporary political theory, literature, and U.S. Supreme Court decisions. The introductory course sequence (MC 270-271) is not a conventional survey of political theory. It introduces students to a theoretical way of thinking about politics and morality at different times and places (for example, the ancient Greek city-state and the Florentine republic) which they can then use as a basis of comparison in analyzing the American experience. Other required "core" courses confront students with the most systematic justifications philosophers have offered for one or another conception of justice and also the most challenging, sometimes unorthodox objections to grand theories of justice. Finally in senior seminars, students can critically explore a focused topic in depth in such a way that many of the themes and questions that have been raised by the curriculum may be viewed in a new light. In addition, a wide range of electives, including courses on technology, religion and politics, the Supreme Court and African-American political thought allow students to pursue more specialized interests relevant to the general concerns of the major.

In short, the Political Theory curriculum is coherent yet flexible. The required courses are carefully sequenced and built on one another. The small number of required courses in the junior and senior year, combined with the flexibility of other Political Theory requirements, enables upper-class students to use the curriculum as the basis for a program that integrates their interests inside and outside the College. After graduation, Political Theory majors have gone on directly to work in a wide variety of public and private sector jobs. Many Political Theory graduates go on to graduate or professional school in law, business, philosophy, and political science. From there, their paths have taken many different turns, for example, serving in the Michigan Legislature, as Solicitor General of the State of Ohio, as Budget Director of the State of Michigan, as Executive Director of the Michigan Democratic Party, and teaching at major universities and small liberal arts colleges.

These features of the PTCD program make it easy to pursue a dual major. Many students combine a PTCD major with a major in another Madison core or a major in a disciplinary department. In recent years, PTCD students have dual majored in biochemistry, criminal justice, economics, English, history, mathematics, philosophy, political science, physics, psychology, religion, secondary education, sociology, and theater.

One college-level math course (calculus or above). Example: MTH 124, MTH 126, MTH 132, MTH 133, MTH 152H, MTH 153H (3-5 cr.)

(MTH may not be counted both as fulfilling the MSU MTH requirement and Methods requirement for PTCD)

One (1) of the Following Related Areas (12-16 credits):

Option 1: Humanities/Social Sciences - Students select four courses (12-16 credits) from one of the following disciplines or fields:

Anthropology, Philosophy, Economics, Political Economy (JMC), English, Political Science, Foreign Language, Social Relations and Policy (JMC), History, Sociology, International Relations (JMC)

At least two of the four courses must be at the 300 level or above. In the case of a related area in a Foreign Language, all four courses must be at the 300 level or above.

With the approval of the student's advisor, the following substitutions are permitted:
(a) four courses in a discipline other than one of those listed above (for example, a related area in Criminal Justice or Journalism)
(b) a coherent and unified multidisciplinary package of courses, (for example, a related area in comparative literature consisting of a mix of courses from French and German [in translation]; a related area in the history of ideas which includes a mix of courses from History and Philosophy).

In addition, appropriate courses offered in Madison College may be substituted for courses offered in one of the above disciplinary departments (for example, a related area in Philosophy may include PTCD courses; a related area in Political Science may include IR and/or PTCD courses; a related area in Sociology may include SRP courses; a related area in Economics may include PE courses).
Option 2: Political Culture

With the approval of their advisor, students select four (preferably advanced) courses that focus on an historically significant polity in another time and place. At least one of these courses must be in the history of the polity. The others may be on any aspect of life of the polity (e.g., art, music, literature, religion, philosophy, economics, family and Social Relations and Policy, politics). Two may be in the study of the language of the polity (either as advanced work in the student's second language or as beginning work in a third language).

Typical examples of historical polities: ancient Egypt, ancient Israel, classical Greece, classical Rome, medieval Christendom, the medieval Islamic world, Renaissance Italy, Reformation Germany, Tudor and Elizabethan England, eighteenth-and nineteenth-century Prussia, Victorian Britain, the British Empire, the Austro-Hungarian Empire, Czarist Russia, the Soviet Union, the Weimar Republic, Nazi Germany, South Africa, and the polities of comparable epochs in the history of the peoples of India, China, Japan, Africa, and Latin America.

In fulfilling this requirement, students may use appropriate Madison courses (including independent studies, second senior seminars, and senior honors theses) where they are relevant.

Option 3: Dual Major

Students pursuing a second major (inside or outside the college) may, with approval of their advisor, use four courses from that major to fulfill the Related Area requirement.

In addition to the coursework outlined above, students are responsible for the following requirements: Integrative Studies, Math Requirement, Language Requirement, Economics requirement, Field Experience and Electives.

TOTAL CREDITS TO GRADUATE: 120
IF YOU WERE REQUIRED TO TAKE MTH 1825, TOTAL CREDITS TO GRADUATE INCREASES TO 123

Examples of Senior Seminars (MC 497)

Hegel's Political Philosophy and the Foundations of Liberalism - This course examines Hegel's political philosophy as a contribution to the contemporary debate about the foundations of liberal democracy. It discusses such themes as the nature and limits of contemporary liberalism, the role of moral argument in a liberal democracy, the relationship between economic and political life in the modern state, and the role of reason in history.

Racism and Western Political Philosophy - This course examines the place of racism in Western political philosophy. While color distinctions/color consciousness and forms of oppression have been pervasive features of the human condition, racism is a modern European phenomenon. What has been (and is) the relationship between this modern European idea of racism and Western political philosophy, especially liberalism and socialism? Is political philosophy, like racism, at bottom ideological?

Political Theory of Late and Post-Modernity - This course pursues some themes in the contemporary controversy surrounding so-called postmodern political theory, namely the consequences of Nietzsche's (among others) radical refutation of the "truths" of religion, philosophy, and ethics. It attempts to understand and evaluate this contemporary current in political theory.

The Spirit of Political Liberty - This course examines Shklar's "liberalism of fear" to see whether it provides the most persuasive defense of limited constitutional government. It also examines Hannah Arendt's revival of the active life of old Greek politics. The course discussion will revolve around these central questions: What is liberalism? Is it a coherent and defensible theory of politics? What is politics? What most threatens political life in the 20th century?

SOCIAL RELATIONS AND POLICY

The Social Relations and Policy major explores the domain of public issues that are especially affected by relations among groups. The major is explicitly historical and comparative, looking at Social Relations and Policy in the United States and internationally, over time. Courses focus on the sociology, history, and politics of intergroup relations, paying close attention to the interplay of such factors as class, race, ethnicity, sex/gender, religious belief and national identity. The program uses the study of Social Relations and Policy as a way to cultivate reasoning, methodological and analytical skills and the capacities for empathetic observation, normative judgment and effective problem solving.

The sophomore sequence provides the conceptual, methodological and substantive bases for upper division work by introducing students to classical and contemporary social theory and comparative social history, and to quantitative and qualitative methodologies. The junior level builds on these skills to assess, in depth, a set of social problems and policy solutions. A senior seminar provides an opportunity to synthesize course work and undertake original research. Students also select from a broad range of electives to develop their expertise and understanding including opportunities for more international and comparative work, greater political analysis, and deeper understanding of particular forms of Social Relations and Policy. A related area requirement is broadly constructed to shape the major in a way that is responsive to individual interests and academic purpose.

Substantively, courses in Social Relations and Policy take up issues such as social identity, inequality and mobility, wealth and poverty, assimilation and pluralism, prejudice and discrimination, intergroup conflict and cooperation, the problem of civil rights and the politics of equality. Students develop knowledge in such areas as immigration, race and ethnic relations, civil rights, family and children, housing and residential segregation, urban and metropolitan policy, schooling and educational policy, social security and social welfare policies. They can go into careers such as labor relations, human resources administration, law, teaching, educational administration, public lobbying, and much more.

MC395 Cultural Dimensions of Public Affairs [Dorr section]

Related Discipline or Area Requirement:
Students must complete two to three additional courses (6-9 cr.) in a related discipline (e.g. Anthropology, Economics, History, Political Science, Psychology, and Sociology) or approved related area (e.g. Ethnicity and Race, Gender and Women's Studies, Urban/Metropolitan Studies, or U.S. Politics). These courses must be beyond the introductory level (i.e., 300-400 level). Courses may be selected in other majors in James Madison College as well.
In addition to the requirements outlined above, students are responsible for the following requirements: Integrative Studies, Math Requirement, Language Requirement, Economics Requirement, Field Experience and Electives.

TOTAL CREDITS TO GRADUATE: 120

IF YOU WERE REQUIRED TO TAKE MTH 1825, TOTAL CREDITS TO GRADUATE INCREASES TO 123

Examples of Senior Seminars (MC 498)

Sex and Law - The purpose of this seminar is to examine the intersection and conflict between sex and law in a liberal democracy - in particular in US liberal democracy. In order to examine this problem we will look closely at a range of materials. First, we will refer to a number of writings of liberal theorists to provide a theoretical framework for our review of subsequent court decisions. Second, we reflect on some feminist critics of liberalism in order to broaden our context. Finally and perhaps the most obvious we will read from the evolving body of court decisions, primarily US Supreme Court but also some state, circuit and district court decisions that are weighing in on this subject matter.

One of the most interesting aspects of this area of law is that it cuts across so many other areas of law. In our study of the problem of sex and law, we will find ourselves confronting issues of federalism, freedom of expression, due process, equal protection and the commerce clause. Hence we enter into a varied and complex area of the law. Among the questions we will examine are: Should sexual matters be regulated? If so, which branch and level of government is the proper authority to regulate sexual matters? To what extent should sexual matters be regulated? Is there a right to privacy? If so, to whom does it extend and is it absolute? What is a family? What is a marriage? Is pornography a form of free expression? If so, should it be protected under the First Amendment and to what extent? As the capstone experience in your studies at MSU, the seminar will draw on and hone all of the skills you have been developing during the past few years - writing, research, listening and speaking skills. Each student will run a seminar session and will critique each other’s work.

Religious and Secular Society: A Comparative Look at the United States and Western Europe - There is a reasonable case to be made that religions actually have more success retaining allegiance when there is a separation of church and state, so that in an apparent paradox, religious devotion may thrive when political structures are secularized. But the separation of church and state is a relatively recent historical phenomenon, and there is also a very strong tradition of the development of contemporary statements involving the suppression of religious power in culture and politics. Even today, numerous political conflicts involve the evocation of religious commitment and religious imagery, so that accusations that particular religious institutions are violating the separation of church and state is a recurrent feature of US politics and of politics in much of the Western world.

So at some level, there are multiple historical incidences of secular society and religious society affecting each other’s growth and social standing, either negatively or positively.

But there is also a case to be made that religious and secular elements of society are distinct segment of modern society, living in partly distinct worlds. And so at times even neighbors cannot understand why one invokes religious faith in discussion of social or political issues, while the other does not understand how one could do otherwise.

This seminar pays particular attention to the relationship between Western Christianity and the development of Western secular society. Readings will address the intersection of religious and secular society in the United States, Europe, and possibly also Latin America.

The Politics of Tolerance and Reconciliation - From 1995 to 2003, the government of South Africa, sought to address the atrocities of the apartheid regime, through Truth and Reconciliation Commission. In 2005, the town of Greensboro North Carolina commissioned a body to address the effects of a civil rights clash that resulted in the deaths of a number of demonstrators in 1979. In Northern Ireland, the European Union has supported numerous efforts to promote ethnic reconciliation through a special support program. These kinds of commissions and programs signal a new repertoire in efforts to heal the effects of protracted racial and social conflicts. But these are not the only public responses to repair the past or atone for longstanding injury: official apologies, reparations, commemorative markers and museums all attest to the global importance of public responses to historic injustice and on-going intolerance. But none of these initiatives come without controversy and contention over their purpose, impact, utility and value.

This seminar examines the cultural politics involved in initiatives to foster tolerance and reconciliation. Can commissions on forgiveness actually create conditions that make reconciliation possible? What does it mean to face history? Does it require reparations? Apologies? Who is responsible? How can long standing grievances be addressed and repaired? What are the effects of cultural initiatives to foster greater communication and interaction among groups that have been in conflict? Can we really teach tolerance? And why are such cultural and political initiatives so rampant in the twenty-first century? Is looking at the past a way of avoiding the future or is it a necessary step to the future?

Together, we will look at efforts at reconciliation in the post-conflict South Africa and Northern Ireland and post-civil rights United States. But students may take up other case studies and other domains for the promotion of tolerance (e.g. sexuality, gender, disability) in their research.
Below is a checklist for students in the Social Relations and Policy major who began at MSU Fall 2013 or after. This sheet is meant to help students visualize how the various parts of the curriculum fit together. Transfer students who are still taking courses at other institutions should choose classes that may be applied toward MSU’s Integrative Studies requirements, MSU’s math requirement, if necessary, or Madison’s foreign language and economics requirements.

MUSLIM STUDIES SPECIALIZATION

The specialization in Muslim Studies is open to all undergraduates at Michigan State University, and may be combined with any undergraduate major.

There are more than 1.5 billion Muslims around the world, the vast majority living outside the Middle East. The largest Muslim communities are in fact in Asia and Africa, with significant and growing diasporas in Europe and the United States. The Muslim Studies Specialization at Michigan State University seeks to explore the diversity of these Muslim communities. It encourages students to acquire a solid background in the history, religion, and culture of Muslim peoples in general, while exploring in depth particular Muslim communities in Asia, Africa, Europe, and the Americas.

The specialization provides students with the opportunity for sustained study of Muslim societies and Islam in a range of disciplines and topics. With the approval of the department that administers the student’s degree program, courses that are used to satisfy the requirements of the specialization may also be used to satisfy the requirements for the bachelor’s degree. The student’s program of study must be approved by the Muslim Studies coordinator prior to enrollment in any course.

Requirements for the Specialization in Muslim Studies
Students must complete the requirements specified below (16 to 32 credits):

1. Completion of second-year college-level competency in Arabic or another language appropriate for Muslim Studies such as Persian, Turkish, Urdu, Bahasa Indonesia, Malay, or Swahili. Students may petition the Muslim Studies Specialization coordinator for approval of an additional foreign language when it relates to a student’s program of study. Students may also petition for a substitution for part or all of the language requirement, replacing the language credits with non-language courses from the course list below. An exception to the language requirement may be granted to students completing a relevant study abroad experience from an approved list of programs available from the Muslim Studies Specialization coordinator. Students with majors in the College of Social Science should consult with their academic adviser to discuss alternatives to fulfillment of the language requirement in this specialization.

2. Five courses with Muslim studies or Islamic content selected from two different categories, with at least one from each category. Not more than one IAH or ISS course may count toward the five required courses. Students must contact the Muslim Studies Specialization coordinator for an updated list of approved courses prior to enrollment.

The following courses do not always contain content relevant to the Specialization in Muslim Studies. Before enrolling in any of these, please consult the Muslim Studies Specialization Coordinator to see if, in the semester in which a student wishes to enroll, the course counts toward the Specialization: Anthropology 422, 429, and 491; French 415, 416, and 447; History 201, 450 and 451; Integrative Studies in Arts and Humanities 211B; Integrative Studies in Social, Behavioral and Economic Sciences 315 and 330B; James Madison College 320, 324D, 325, 390, 391, 492, and 497; Political Science 344, 351, 354, 358 and 460; SOC 499

Upon completion of the requirements of the Specialization in Muslim Studies, the student should contact the coordinator for the specialization and request certification for the specialization. After the certification is approved by the Dean of the College, the Office of the Registrar will enter on the student’s academic record the name of the specialization and the date that it was completed. This certification will appear on the student’s transcript.

POLITICAL ECONOMY SPECIALIZATION

The specialization in Political Economy is open to all undergraduate students at Michigan State University, and may be combined with any undergraduate major.

The specialization in Political Economy offers a challenging, interdisciplinary course of study in economic theory and policy. Political Economy approaches the study of public affairs by incorporating economic, political, social, and historical considerations in the analysis. The program aims to foster a critical understanding of economic forces and their relationship to issues of prosperity and social justice. In the tradition of classical political economy, the curriculum examines the interconnections between economic organization, social forces, economic power and government policy.

The Political Economy curriculum embraces contemporary economic analysis while recognizing a broader context of politics and society. Theory is taken seriously. Students confront conflicting theoretical paradigms in political economy, including their historical foundations and their contemporary extensions. Theory is also applied to significant real world problems confronting society and government. In order to further understand these issues, courses develop quantitative skills and empirical analysis that build on theoretical foundations. Finally, the program takes politics seriously. Discussions of policy address the origin and nature of struggles among interested parties and how their actions are constrained or promoted by institutional arrangements.

Political Economy combines theory, technical expertise, and the humanistic tradition of the liberal arts. The specialization is an excellent preparation for careers in business, law, and government. It also enhances the theoretical foundations and empirical experience in economics now expected of entering students in graduate programs in business, economics, public administration, and labor and industrial relations.

The specialization in Science, Technology, Environment and Public Policy is open to all undergraduate students at Michigan State University and may be combined with any undergraduate major.

The Science, Technology, Environment and Public Policy Specialization (STEPPS) is a cross-collegiate endeavor bridging the strengths of James Madison College, Lyman Briggs College and the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife. STEPPS will train you in public policy that relates to science, technological development, and environmental science to promote change, become social, political and scientific leaders, and formulate and implement public policy. Students can use STEPPS to study public policy related to topics such as health care, biomedicine, the environment, space science, national security, bioethics, communications technology, sustainability, science and religion, public health, information technology, and science education.

The increasing complexity of scientific and technological issues challenges scientists and public policy makers alike. Solutions to these problems require interdisciplinary collaboration among technological, environmental, natural and social sciences, as well as the humanities. STEPPS prepares future professionals to integrate these disciplines as policy-makers, policy analysts, or resource managers. It teaches students how to communicate with multiple audiences and become leaders in developing innovative science, technology, and environmental policies.

STEPPS will allow interested students to pursue work in public policy as it relates to science, technology and the environment. This program 1) exposes students to the policy-making process at the local, state, national and international levels; 2) raises normative questions about issues like the role of scientists as experts, computers and privacy concerns, federal funding of science, genetic engineering, the role of the military in technological development, and issues in natural resources management; 3) examines historical trends and analyzes social relationships; 4) builds a strong understanding of scientific principles that can be used to formulate sound policy initiatives; and 5) facilitates links between policy-making and science, technology and the environment. Graduates of STEPPS understand how policies are constructed at different levels of governance, and they possess the skills necessary to evaluate the merits of public policy that relates to issues of science, technology and the environment. STEPPS produces professionals who are well prepared to synthesize information from multiple disciplines and integrate social and natural sciences in policy formulation and analysis. It also prepares students for graduate work in policy sciences, public health, environmental law, science and technology studies, and natural resource management.

STEPP Specialization:

1. Science, Technology, Environment and Public Policy

One of the following courses:

- LB 181 Introduction to Science, Technology, the Environment and Public Policy 3 credits
- MC 181 Introduction to Science, Technology, the Environment and Public Policy 3 credits
- FW 181 Introduction to Science, Technology, the Environment and Public Policy 3 credits

2. Science Applications
   a. Any two natural science courses. Classes must be at the 200-level or above, consist primarily of natural science and not be integrative studies course. Students should check with STEPPS Coordinator to ensure that the particular course they chose will adequately fulfill the category.

Students interested in pursuing the Science, Technology, Environment and Public Policy Specialization should contact the specialization’s coordinator, Prof. Mark Largent (largent@msu.edu) and ask to be listed as a STEPPS student.

Upon completion of the requirements for the specialization, the student should contact the Dean of James Madison College and request certification for the completion of the specialization. After the Dean of James Madison College approves the certification, the Office of the Registrar will enter the name of the specialization and the date that it was completed on the student’s academic record. This certification will appear on the student’s transcript.
Science, Technology Environment and Public Policy Specialization

This is a checklist for students in the Science, Technology, Environment and Public Policy specialization who began at MSU Fall of 2008 or later. Students should fulfill each of the following five requirements:

1. Gateway Course. Any one of the following courses:
   - FW 181
   - LB 181
   - MC 181

2. Science Applications. Two courses:
   - Classes must be at the 200-level or above, consist primarily of natural science, and not be integrative studies courses. Students should check with the STEPPS Coordinator to ensure that the particular course they choose adequately fulfills this category.

3. Public Policy. Any two of the following courses:
   - ABM 400
   - ABM 427
   - ANR 250

1 A student may petition the Coordinator of STEPPS to allow for any class not on this list to be accepted in fulfillment of any of the five required categories. In these cases the final decision is left to the Coordinator, and students should always seek approval before enrolling in the class.

2 At least two of the six courses in the Public Policy, the Science Applications, or the History, Philosophy and Sociology of Science requirements must be taken outside of the student’s major department.
WESTERN EUROPEAN STUDIES SPECIALIZATION

The Specialization in Western European Studies provides an opportunity for students to pursue a significant and coherent body of course work in the culture, history, politics, economics, and geography of Western Europe. Some of the courses in the specialization focus on individual countries, while other courses are comparative and cross-national.

A Steering Committee, composed of faculty from the colleges whose courses are included in the Specialization in Western European Studies, oversees the specialization. Students who elect the Specialization in Western European Studies are encouraged to complete courses that are related to Western Europe in partial fulfillment of the University Integrative Studies requirement.

Requirements for the Specialization in Western European Studies

The student must meet the requirements specified below:

1. Foreign Language Proficiency: The student must demonstrate proficiency in a Western European language at a level equivalent to the completion of five semesters of study at the university level. The fifth semester course must be a course in which the language is used to study the history, literature, politics, or culture of the related country, rather than a course that involves only grammar or composition. The results of the MSU foreign language placement test will be considered in determining whether or not the student has fulfilled this requirement.

2. Social Science: The student must complete a minimum of three courses totaling at least 9 credits selected from at least two of the following groups of courses:

- Economics
  - EC 306 Comparative Economic Systems 3 credits
  - EC 340 Survey of International Economics 3 credits
  - EC 440 International Trade 3 credits
  - EC 441 International Finance 3 credits

- Geography
  - GEO 336 Geography of Europe 3 credits

- James Madison College
  - MC 270 Classical Republicanism 4 credits
  - MC 271 Constitutionalism and Democracy 4 credits
  - MC 324E Regional Politics, Cooperation, and Conflict in Europe 4 credits
  - MC 325 State and Society in Comparative Perspective 4 credits
  - MC 329 European Security: Challenges and Strategies 4 credits
  - MC 327 The Comparative Analysis of Foreign Policy 4 credits
  - MC 370 Radical Challenges to Liberal Democracy 4 credits
  - MC 371 Beyond Liberal Democracy? New Directions in Political Theory 4 credits
  - MC 386 Women and Power in Comparative Perspective 4 credits
  - MC 387 Jews and Anti-Semitism 4 credits
  - MC 390 Advanced Topics in Public Affairs 5 credits
  - MC 492 Senior Seminar in International Relations (W) 5 credits

- Political Science
  - PLS 342 Comparative Political Economy 3 credits
  - PLS 356 West European Politics 3 credits
  - PLS 440 Comparative Politics (W) 4 credits
  - PLS 460 International Relations (W) 4 credits

3. Humanities: The student must complete a minimum of three courses totaling at least 7 credits selected from at least two of the following groups of courses:

- History of Art
  - HA 201 Ancient and Medieval Art 4 credits

4. Supervised Research Paper: The student must complete one of the following four options:
   a. Independent Study. A research paper on a topic related to Western Europe completed while enrolled in an independent study course of at least 3 credits.
   b. Overseas Study. A research paper completed while enrolled in a MSU overseas study program in Western Europe totaling at least 3 credits.
   c. Internship. A research paper on a topic related to Western Europe completed while enrolled in a field experience or internship course of at least 3 credits.
   d. Capstone Course. A research paper on a topic related to Western Europe that is completed while enrolled in a capstone course of at least 3 credits.

Upon completion of the requirements for the Specialization in Western European Studies as specified by the chairperson of the Steering Committee, the student should contact the Dean of James Madison College and request certification for the completion of the specialization. After the certification is approved by the Dean of James Madison College, the Office of the Registrar will enter on the student's academic record the name of the specialization and the date that it was completed. This certification will appear on the student's transcript.

NOTE: The Western European Studies Specialization is the process of being changed to the European Studies Specialization, pending university review during the 2012-2013 school year. Page 47 contains a draft of the proposed curriculum.
Below is a checklist for students in the Western European Studies specialization who began at MSU Fall 2000 or after. It may help students visualize how the various parts of the curriculum fit together.

I. Foreign Language: Demonstrate proficiency in a Western European language at a level equivalent to the completion of five semesters of study at the university level. MADISON HONORS PROGRAM

Any Madison student may elect to enter the College Honors Program after selecting his/her major. In order to be designated as having successfully completed the Honors Program, a student must meet the following requirements:

- Successful completion of three Honors Options in courses required in the "core" of the student's major (i.e., in courses in the major with the designation MC, either required or selectives). Successful completion = meeting all the specified requirements for the awarding of the honors option designation, including receipt of a 3.5 or better in each of the courses.

- Successful completion of one independent study (3-4 credits) in the student's major during the junior year. Successful completion = 3.5 or better in the course.

- Successful completion of a senior honors thesis (two semesters) and a successful public defense of that thesis. Successful completion = a 3.5 or better in each senior thesis course, or overall when the grade given in the first semester is deferred.

A student whose work is deemed extraordinary by the faculty members of the student's major will be designated as having completed the Honors Program in James Madison College with Highest Distinction.

HONORS OPTIONS

For many courses not offered with "Honors" sections, students may earn Honors credit by completing Honors-caliber study with special guidance from the professor. This is common in Madison, with many students working closely with faculty, and meeting in small, regular sessions for their Honors option Madison courses.

MSU HONORS COLLEGE

The MSU Honors College provides special programs of study for unusually talented undergraduates in all majors at MSU. The Honors College admits first-year students by invitation on the basis of nationally standardized test scores and outstanding high school achievement. Members of the Honors College are expected from the outset to pursue broader and more rigorous programs of study than other first-year students. Madison's first-year Honors College students are advised by the Director of Academic Affairs and by an advisor in the Honors College. Students not admitted into the Honors College for their first year may apply if they meet certain criteria including a specific grade point average their first semester. Students with questions should see the Director of Academic Affairs or an Honors College Advisor. For a detailed account of Honors College benefits and requirements, students can consult MSU's Academic Programs Catalog.
NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL SCHOLARSHIPS AND AWARDS

Each year a number of James Madison College students apply for prestigious national and international awards, scholarships and fellowships. Over the past forty years, Madison students have won numerous Rhodes, Marshall, Fulbright, Truman, National Science Foundation and Mitchell awards. Madison students have also served as Carnegie Junior Fellows and received Fulbright awards. Many of these major national and international scholarships and fellowships are sponsored by international organizations and government agencies. These prestigious award competitions are rigorous and require that student’s think critically about important public policy issues, but also their short-term and long-term career goals and life plans. Madison students are encouraged to ask their academic adviser or the Assistant Dean about the awards and scholarships. It is never too early to begin thinking about these scholarships. First-year students should discuss these with their advisers and professors. Madison College faculty members are a great resource for learning more about these scholarships and fellowships.

UNDERGRADUATE RESEARCH

At James Madison College, students are challenged to be critical thinkers, problem solvers, and change agents, both in the classroom and throughout their lives during and after college. Madison students engage in a rigorous academic curriculum and majors that broaden their perspectives on an array of issues critical to the world today. And for many, the Madison experience sparks intellectual curiosity, the desire to dig deeper by conducting undergraduate research. Students pursue their interests in a variety of ways. Students may engage in undergraduate research for academic credit as part of a senior honors thesis or by preparing to present their original research at an academic conference. The most common forms of UR at Madison are: Research as part of a faculty-led project, Independent Study, and Professorial Assistantships. Please speak with your academic adviser to learn more about these opportunities. Another popular way for students to showcase their research is through participation in the University Undergraduate Research and Arts Forum. Every spring MSU brings together students, faculty and staff for this exciting event. Please visit their web site at http://urca.msu.edu/uuraf.html. The McNair/SROP Program provides another way for student to gain valuable research skills and practical preparation for graduate study. Please visit the McNair/SROP web page at: https://www.msu.edu/~oss/mcnair/. Another way to learn about undergraduate research opportunities is to visit the Venture web site at http://venture.msu.edu/. Venture is a database of undergraduate research, scholarship and creative opportunities available at MSU.

INTERDISCIPLINARY INQUIRY AND TEACHING FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM (IIT)

The Interdisciplinary Inquiry and Teaching Fellowship Program (IIT) is a partnership between the Michigan State University Graduate School and James Madison Residential College of Public Affairs at Michigan State University.

The primary goal of the IIT Fellowship Program is to broaden and enrich the professional development experience of a diverse group of graduate students by placing them within an environment, James Madison College, with an established tradition in excellence in undergraduate teaching. Selected fellows work closely with a core group of Madison faculty to engage in structured discussions on pedagogy and practice, on interdisciplinary course design and curriculum development, and on general interaction with undergraduates. They also work with core faculty to investigate theoretical and practical applications of interdisciplinary inquiry and research.

In addition to structured discussions, fellows have opportunities to be mentored in preparing to be undergraduate teachers and faculty. Such opportunities include classroom observation, guest lecturing, co-curricular planning, and informal meetings with student groups (e.g. honors options).

Fellows also have opportunities to engage in individual or collaborative research projects in interdisciplinary teaching, and to present their findings in a public forum. Support for this project work will include a speaker’s series, a working papers series, and the interdisciplinary inquiry collaborative.
STUDY ABROAD

James Madison College offers several summer and semester long study abroad programs which allow students to fulfill degree requirements (including the Field Experience requirement) while gaining valuable experience abroad. Following is a description of the Madison-sponsored and co-sponsored programs. Many more MSU-sponsored programs are offered in the summer and throughout the academic year throughout the world. Information on these programs is available from the Office of Study Abroad at MSU.

SUMMER PROGRAMS:

- The International Relations in Brussels Program is designed for undergraduate students with an interest in political science, international studies and international relations. The program consists of four weeks of lectures, discussions and field trips to important European institutions located in and around Brussels: the Commission of the European Communities, the NATO Secretariat, the North Atlantic Assembly, and the Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers, Europe (SHAPE). Three IR courses are offered (students choose two), each with a European focus. They are taught by Madison faculty and NATO staff. Students may live with a Brussels family or in an apartment.

- United Kingdom: Environmental Science, Policy and Criminology in Scotland and England (every other year) This is a co-sponsored program will provide a multi-disciplinary approach to enhancing student understanding of the complexity of governing and managing sustainable coupled-human and natural resource systems. The course will expose students to impacts of globalization and the challenges of conserving biodiversity, fisheries, and wildlife resources in developed nations at multiple scales. Students will compare the U.S., the United Kingdom, and other nations with a particular emphasis on the need for enforceable conservation regulations/laws and sustainable behaviors. The program will also introduce students to applicable scientific collection methods and how that information is used in creation of policy and management of fisheries, wildlife, and related resources.

- Environmental Policy in the Eastern Mediterranean Basin: Greece and Turkey (every other year) is designed to provide students with an enriching experience that will increase their understanding of the cultural, political and environmental systems of the eastern Mediterranean basin, lessons are led by faculty from Michigan State University in cooperation with local experts. The integrative themes of the program allows students with a biological, ecological, social, cultural, or public affairs interest to interact with and learn from one another. The program provides students with the opportunity to earn ISS, ISB, FW and ANR credits. These credits will fulfill a portion of their academic requirements, as well as provide them an enriching experiential learning experience, broaden their perspective and understanding of various cultures, and allow them to discover the complex relations influencing societies and their environmental resources.

- Democratization and Economic Transition in Turkey. This program is designed for undergraduate students with an interest in political science, international relations, international business, political economy, political theory, and social relations. It offers formal coursework and lectures at universities and institutes in Turkey. Key themes will be the political and economic aspects of post-communist transition, the challenge of designing policies to address the region’s social and environmental problems, and Turkey’s political and economic role as a nation on the border between Europe and Asia. Lecturers will be drawn from Koc University in Istanbul, Turkey.

- Comparative Republicanism in Rome and Florence, Italy. This program is about the comparative study of the three most important Western experiences with republicanism – ancient, renaissance and modern. Students will have the opportunity to compare these three pivotal republican experiences as comprehensive ways of life. To facilitate such an exploration, the program will examine the relationship between politics and culture, and especially the arts in each republican experience. In the classical period, the focus will be on Rome – the greatest, most powerful, and influential of the ancient republics. Rome was also the predatory republic that transformed itself into an empire and thereby ended republican life in the West for almost 1500 years. The Renaissance included the first rebirth of republicanism, especially in Florence, which, with Venice, was one of the two greatest, most powerful, and influential Renaissance republics. Florence was also the birthplace of modern political theory, which in Machiavelli's works, took the form of a critique of the defects of both ancient and Renaissance republics and initiated a project designed to remedy those defects. That project came to fruition with the second rebirth of republicanism in the West, marked by the American Revolution and Founding and the establishment of the American republic. Multiple excursions will introduce students to the treasures of Rome and Florence and be integral parts of the required courses.

- Public Affairs at Cambridge University offers students the chance to study at St. Catharine’s College of Cambridge University. One of the two oldest English Universities, Cambridge was established in the early 13th century. The individual colleges, including St. Catharine's, were originally societies of teachers, later transformed into societies of students and teachers. The area is rich in history and tradition, and the colleges reflect the patronage of a long line of royal benefactors. Three 4-credit courses are offered (usually cross-listed in IR, PTCD, CCP and SRP), from which students may choose two. The courses, usually taught by Cambridge University tutors, are often designed in conformity with the descriptions and requirements for regular Madison College courses.

- MSU Study Abroad Program at Hebrew University/Rothberg School is designed for undergraduate students with an interest in international relations, Social Relations and Policy, Jewish and Middle Eastern studies. Two Madison courses are offered (one in IR and one in SRP), one IAH course, as well as independent study options. It offers a program of formal coursework and lectures at Hebrew University/Rothberg School. Courses are taught by Madison professors and Hebrew University professors.

- The Transformation of Modern Latin America and the Caribbean is designed to provide an up-to-date, balanced, and objective understanding of public policy issues and state society relations in Latin America and the Caribbean. It will address the outcomes of economic liberalization reforms and the political and social contexts, institutions, preferences and conflicts emerging from these reforms, including the emergence of ethnic social factors and multicultural policies in individual countries, in particular, Brazil, in recent years. The coursework can be counted toward requirements of the majors in James Madison College and the MSU specialization in Latin American and Caribbean Studies.

- Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity & Sexual Politics in Amsterdam In this program, students will learn about sex and gender politics and policy in the Netherlands, one of the most sexually liberal countries in the world. This nation was the first to legalize same sex marriages, grants sex workers legitimate status, and covers sex reassignment surgeries through its government health plan. Yet tolerance for sexual and gender diversity is counter-balanced by a pervasive social intolerance of Muslim immigrants. Students will study sexual and gender politics with Dutch scholars and speakers working in organizations relating to sex workers, sex education, transgender advocacy, and LGBTQ rights in order to advance their knowledge of these topics in a comparative context. Students will reside in the vibrant city of Amsterdam, where world-famous museums and cafes abound alongside beautiful canals and historic architecture. Students will be housed in dormitories at the University of Amsterdam. Excursions may include a visit to a sex-reassignment clinic, a guided tour of the Red Light District, and a trip to the World Population Fund Center for Sexual Education in Utrecht. Students will also have the opportunity to visit Brussels, where they may meet with LGBTQ refugees and representatives from the International Organization for Lesbian and Gay Rights.

SEMESTER PROGRAMS

- Business, Economics and International/Public Affairs in Budapest Program is designed for students with an interest in international business, political science, international relations, political economy, political theory and Social Relations and Policy. It offers a program of formal coursework and lectures at the premier social science and business university in Budapest, Hungary -- the Budapest University of Economic Sciences (formerly Karl Marx University). A substantial range of graduate courses is also available. An important focus of the experience is on the political, economic and social change underway in the struggle to build democratic government and market economies in the wake of the fall of Communism.

- University of Innsbruck, Austria. Study abroad at one of Europe’s oldest universities! Founded in 1669 by Leopold I, Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire, and located in the Austrian Alps, the University of Innsbruck is a major European institution of higher learning and research. Semester and academic year options allow participants full integration into University of Innsbruck collegiate life.

- Semester Study in Public and International Affairs at the Institut d'Études Politiques in Lille, France. This program offers MSU students the opportunity to study international relations, comparative state and society relationships and political economy at L'Institut d'Études Politiques (Sciences Po) in Lille, France. Learn about European politics, society and political economy, European affairs and developments, and international relations with a US-European relations focus. The small campus offers personalized attention in and outside the classroom with an intensive student life environment of various clubs and unions. Each Wednesday evening offers a guest lecture delivered by a visiting politician, journalist or scholar. The Institute organizes also organizes a program of co-curricular visits to noteworthy political and economic institutions of France and the European Union (especially in nearby Brussels), as well as historical sites in the surrounding region. International students are invited to take part in a two-week introductory session before the academic year commences. This session provides students with assistance in academic orientation (e.g., social science methods, French as a foreign language) and administrative matters (registration, opening a bank account, finding accommodations, etc). International students may also register for a one-year course leading to the Certificate of Political Studies (CEP), which involves courses dealing with French civilization and politics, and international relations.

- Bilkent University in Ankara, Turkey. As a participant in this program, you will have the opportunity to study alongside Turkish students at an English-speaking university in a unique country. Bordering seven different nations (Greece, Bulgaria, Georgia, Armenia, Iran, Iraq and Syria), Turkey is a fascinating country with diverse influences. It bridges the European and Asian continents with a remarkable history and abundant natural beauty, varied geographically with fertile plains, volcanic peaks and miles of coastline. The Turks are predominantly Muslim and derive many of their customs from Islamic practices. For more information on Turkey, see http://www.turkey.org/start.html. The Republic, founded in 1923 at the end of the Ottoman Empire, has developed into a modern, democratic state that is currently being considered for membership to the European Union. Turkey is a country of diverse cultures, beliefs, ideas, nature and history and is often considered a nation at the crossroads, not only in a geographic sense but also politically and economically. This eighty year old democratic republic now has a vibrant business sector and is an active participant in international trade and investment. The Turkish culture represents an interesting mix of the east and west with a strong heritage of modernization over the past several decades. Students will be exposed to a highly rigorous and competitive higher education system that has risen to meet the challenges of this modern democracy.

- Bogazici University in Istanbul, Turkey. Boğaziçi University is located in Istanbul, Turkey, a captivating destination with remarkable history and rich beauty. Istanbul is divided by the Bosphorus, the strait that connects the Sea of Marmara and the Black Sea. On one side is Anatolia, the western tip of Asia; on the other side lie the eastern shores of Europe. Istanbul’s port area is visited by all manner of ships, and many Istanbul residents commute to work by boat. The former capital of the three successive Roman, Byzantine, and Ottoman empires, Istanbul honors and preserves the legacy of its past while looking forward to its modern future. Indeed, it is Istanbul’s variety that fascinates its visitors. Much of the history is reflected in the ancient castles and museums, Islamic palaces and mosques, and centuries-old bazaars and markets. Formerly Robert College, the first American College to be established outside the boundaries of the United States, Boğaziçi University was officially established in 1971. The university accommodates approximately 10,000 students. About 7,500 of these are undergraduate students and the rest are graduate students. English is the medium of instruction. Most of the students admitted to undergraduate programs at Boğaziçi University come from the top one half of one percent of their secondary schools. The distinctive place that Boğaziçi occupies in the world of higher education is matched by its unique and historic location on the shores of the Bosphorus. The academic facilities, faculty housing and student dormitories are all situated on a hill with unmatched natural beauty. The South Campus encompasses the oldest buildings of the university - Assembly Hall (used for lectures, concerts, public meetings and student/faculty assemblies), the Gymnasium, the Administration Building, the Engineering Building, and the English Preparatory Building (where the School of Foreign Language is housed). This campus also boasts residence halls, a computer center, infirmary, and museum.

- Central European Studies in the Czech Republic is an academically challenging program located at Palacky University in the Czech Republic. Students experience first-hand the political, social and economic transitions in the Czech Republic. They also have the opportunity to participate in Czech culture and social life as well as travel within the Czech Republic and surrounding countries.

- City University of Hong Kong City University offers the opportunity to study in a dynamic modern metropolis steeped in unique blends of Eastern and Western traditions - Hong Kong. Consistently ranked as one of the top universities in China, City University offers coursework in a wide range of disciplines where you will study alongside a diverse student body represented by over 25 nations. All courses are conducted in English, and Hong Kong provides an excellent hub for exploring mainland China and the entire Asian continent. City University is located between the districts of Kowloon Tong and Shek Kip Mei in the region of Kowloon, Hong Kong. It is a densely populated campus with high rise dorms, tech savvy classrooms, escalators, and the highest ratio of computers per student out of any Hong Kong university. City U is a young dynamic institution founded in 1984. It has a student population of more than 26,000 enrolled in over 145 programs in a wide range of disciplines. Some 1,000 full-time academic staff and 600 full-time research staff are devoted to teaching, basic and applied research, consultancy and other scholarly activities. It has a diverse campus with over 300 exchange students from 40+ countries.

Students who are planning to be waived from the JMC Field Experience requirement based on the completion of a classroom-based Study Abroad program need remember that they are still required to complete the minimum number of MC credits for graduation (51 for those who entered as freshman, 41 for those who transferred to the College). To be so waived, students must complete a Petition for Substitution of Field Experience, and have it approved by the Director of Field Experience, prior to undertaking the Study Abroad program.

MADISON-SPONSORED STUDY ABROAD PROGRAMS OFFERING INTERNSHIPS

The following Study Abroad programs offer Madison Field Experience credit, and involve extended internships with local organizations and offices. On-site staff secure internships, arrange housing, and provide orientation and emergency support. As with all Madison Field Experience internships, students must have Junior standing at the time of the program to be eligible to participate. Full details can be obtained from the Director of Field Experience.

- Internships in Thailand - 13 week Spring semester program in Chiangmai offering introductory coursework on development issues in Southeast Asia, and Thai language. - Internships in Singapore – 12 week internship program.
TEACHER CERTIFICATION

Students may apply to the College of Education for admission into the Teacher Education Program during their sophomore year for admission during their junior year. This is a limited enrollment major and is designed to be a “five year program”, i.e., students complete a teaching major and minor simultaneously as they complete their Bachelor of Arts major in James Madison College. They then return, after their BA has been granted, for a year’s certification work including student teaching and graduate work in College of Education courses. The resulting certification will be as a Social Studies teacher at the secondary level. In some instances, however, students may be certified at the elementary level. Students enrolled in a teaching certification program and fulfilling a student teaching requirement are only held to a minimum of 41 MC credits (rather than 51). They may also enroll for TE 150, TE 250, or CEP 240 to test their interests. Interested students should contact the Director of Academic Affairs.

The following disciplinary majors leading to the Bachelor of Arts degree in James Madison College are available for teacher certification: Comparative Cultures and Politics, International Relations, Political Theory and Constitutional Democracy, and Social Relations and Policy. Students who complete the requirements for one of these disciplinary majors and the requirements for teacher certification are recommended for a teaching certificate in social studies. Persons with teacher certification in social studies are qualified to teach history, political science, geography, and economics.

Teacher Education requirements for Madison majors

• Field Experience (MC400/MC401) is replaced by student teaching

• Related area is replaced by TE, HST and GEO courses

• All MC Majors are comprehensive majors. Teaching minors are not required.

• Students must also take: TE 150, TE 250, TE 302, TE 407 and TE 408

Comparative Cultures and Politics: Courses in Addition to regular requirements.

Students who elect one of the disciplinary majors referenced above must contact the James Madison College Assistant Dean.
SPECIALIZATIONS

MSU offers several areas of study as "specializations." These specializations supplement or complement a student’s major, and draws upon courses from several colleges, departments or schools. The completion of a specialization shall be entered on one’s academic record, so that the name of the specialization and the date it was completed appears on one’s transcript. Examples of specializations currently offered include the following: African-American History and Culture; Asian Studies; Environmental Studies; Film Studies; Jewish Studies; Latin and Caribbean Studies; Latino Studies, Political Economy, Russian and Eastern European Studies; and Western European Studies.

James Madison College is currently the sponsoring college for four specializations: Muslim Studies; Political Economy; Science, Technology, Environment and Public Policy; and Western European Studies Specializations. Detailed information about these specializations is available in the Office of Academic Affairs, S. Case Hall.

MINORS

MSU offers several “minors.” As opposed to specialization that focus on a specific area of study, typically minors focus on one academic discipline. Example of minors include: Anthropology, Computer Science, Dance, Economics, Philosophy, as well as a number of foreign languages. For more information about a minor students must contact an academic advisor in the department that administers the program.

3 + 3 Legal Education Admission Program (LEAP)

The Legal Education Admission Program allows select James Madison College students to complete their Bachelor of Arts degree and Law Degree in six years. This program requires careful planning in conjunction with the Assistant Dean in James Madison College. To be considered for admission students must meet with the Assistant Dean at the end of their first-year, complete a minimum of 91 MSU credits, take the LSAT at the end of the second year and apply for admission to the MSU College of Law by February 15th of their third year. Students must have a minimum cumulative GPA of 3.60 and a 156 or higher on the LSAT.

PHI BETA KAPPA

CRITERIA FOR ELECTION TO THE EPSILON OF MICHIGAN CHAPTER OF PHI BETA KAPPA. (SUBJECT TO CHANGE – BASED ON GRADE DISTRIBUTION)
To be eligible for consideration for election to Phi Beta Kappa, this country's oldest and most prestigious honorary society that acknowledges excellence in liberal arts, Madison students must meet all of the following requirements.
Selections are made each semester. The initiation banquet is held in the spring for all newly elected members.

1. STANDING AND GPA: Attain at least junior standing, with a minimum of 75 percent of earned credits in liberal arts and sciences (i.e., not in technical or professional courses).

A cumulative GPA of at least 3.71 at the time of graduation.

JUNIORS must have a GPA of at least 3.90 for election.
SENIORS will be held to a GPA of 3.75 to ensure that they will have a 3.71 GPA at the time of graduation.

TRANSFER STUDENTS must earn an MSU GPA according to the following scale:

2. MATHEMATICS: Requirement may be satisfied in any one of the following ways:

A) Completion of MTH 112 or any higher MTH course
B) Completion of STT 200 or any higher STT course
C) Placement into MTH 132, based on a score of 19 on the MSU Math Placement Test, or an ACT Math score of 29, or an SAT Math score of 680.

3. FOREIGN LANGUAGE: Requirement may be satisfied in any one of the following ways:

A) Completion of a second year of a college language course (202). [Placement at the 202-level will not satisfy this requirement. Students must complete a college level 202 course or higher.]
B) Completion of a 300/400 level language/literature course in one of the foreign languages (Excluding literature in translation courses and reading proficiency courses for graduate students)
C) Native speakers of a language other than English may present documentation on their college-level proficiency in that language -- usually with a high school or college transcript showing they have completed academic work in the native language.

4) INTEGRATIVE STUDIES/GENERAL EDUCATION: Completion of 30 semester credits:

A) MC 201 and MC 202 (or two ISS courses at the 200 and 300 level)
B) MC 111 or MC 112 (or one WRA course, from 110 through 150)
C) One ISB course and one ISP course, with a lab in one of the two.
D) IAH 201 and a second IAH course.

NOTE: Honors College students and Transfer students are allowed to substitute alternative coursework to satisfy all Integrative Studies/General Education requirements. Information on all honoraries is included in MSU's Academic Programs Catalog. We list Phi Beta Kappa requirements here because they may affect students’ decisions about their curriculum early on in their career at MSU.
ADVICE ABOUT LAW SCHOOL

A special word should be said about law school; many Madison graduates eventually pursue law degrees. No one curriculum best prepares an undergraduate for the study of law. Announcement bulletins and admissions information from various law schools reveal that law schools neither require nor recommend that pre-law students major in any specific discipline. What they urge, however, is that students learn to write the English language with clarity and precision, that they acquire a broad background in an academically rigorous program of study and have a carefully sequenced and coherent undergraduate program of study.

Students enrolled in any of James Madison's College's majors will have ample opportunities to develop the skills that should be a part of any pre-law program.

In addition to the excellent grounding students receive from the Madison courses in their majors, they may consider taking course work in some of these areas:

- Accounting and Economics. The minimum courses needed for a solid grounding in economics are MSU's EC 201-202, Introduction to Economics (or their Honors equivalents). Students may also consider EC 330, Money, Banking and Financial Markets; or EC 380, Labor Relations and Labor Market Policy. A background in principles of accounting (ACC 230, Survey of Accounting Concepts) is helpful.

- British and American Constitutional and Legal History. Madison's MC 373A, Constitutionalism: The Supreme Court, and MC 378: Law and Social Groups are devoted to American Constitutional issues examined through case law. Students may also consider taking some of the following: History (HST) 350-351, Constitutional and Legal History of England; HST 318, United States Constitutional History; Political Science (PLS) 320, The American Judicial Process; or PLS 321, American Constitutional Law.

- Reasoning. Some students who want to improve their reasoning skills in preparation for the LSAT have found that Philosophy 330, Formal Reasoning has been helpful.

Many of the courses cited previously will work to fulfill related area requirements for most Madison majors.

Besides coursework, there are other ways for students to decide whether law school is the right choice for them. One way to more information is a College-sponsored Law School Information Night, and another is MSU's Pre-Law association. The Pre-Law Association is comprised of all majors in the University and sponsors activities and guest speakers designed to expose students to various areas of law and to current legal issues.

Most law schools are impressed by students who can do very different things well. Students should remember this general point: since many qualified students apply to top law schools, it is important to plan a curriculum that will stand out because of its excellence and academic rigor.

Madison graduates have been successful at many law schools across the country, including: University of Chicago; University of Michigan; Northwestern University; Chicago-Kent School of Law; Wayne State University; University of Detroit; American University; Emory; Harvard University; University of Texas; University of Virginia; Yale; Stanford; Georgetown; George Washington; Vanderbilt; and Tulane.
EXPECTATIONS AND STANDARDS

JAMES MADISON COLLEGE POLICY ON ACADEMIC DISHONESTY

The James Madison College Faculty Policy on Academic Dishonesty reads as follows:

The faculty recognize that it is the responsibility of the instructor to take appropriate action if an act of academic dishonesty is discovered. It is further understood that a student may appeal a judgment of academic dishonesty to the University Academic Integrity Hearing Board. The Faculty Assembled recommend that in cases involving proven academic dishonesty, the student should receive, as a minimum, a 0.0 in the course and that a record of the circumstances, sanctions, and any appeal, be placed in the student's confidential file. The individual faculty member or the Dean may recommend further action, including dismissal from the University, to the College Hearing Board. If a second case of academic dishonesty should occur, the recommendation is that the faculty, through the Office of Academic Affairs, should seek the student's dismissal from the College and the University.

The Faculty Assembled declare it a violation of College standards to submit the same written work for more than one course without prior express consent of the instructor(s) involved. It should be understood that violation of this standard may result in sanctions being applied, and at the discretion of the instructor these sanctions may include those that are applied in cases of academic dishonesty.

Any student assigned a penalty grade based on academic dishonesty is entitled to challenge the charge. Challenges may be referred to the University Academic Integrity Hearing Board. Students should consult the Academic Freedom Report.

CODE OF TEACHING RESPONSIBILITY

The University's Code of Teaching Responsibility is available on the WEB: http://www.msu.edu/unit/facrecds/FacHand/code.html. It outlines the expectations of instructors and procedures by which students may handle complaints. We do not reprint the Code here, but affirm that Madison faculty abide by it as all University faculty are expected to.

MADISON POLICY ON CREDIT/NO-CREDIT GRADING

The Credit/No-credit system is intended to allow MSU students to study in areas outside their major fields of study without jeopardizing their grade-point average. Students may opt to enroll for a class "CR-NC," but for credit to be granted in that course the student must perform at or above the 2.0 level. Students must contact the Registrar in the first week of classes to be eligible for Credit/No Credit. Grades on the "CR-NC" system are not included in computing the semester or cumulative grade-point average.

Integrative Studies requirements in the University are excluded from the Credit/No-Credit system (they must be taken on the numerical grade scale). Each college is empowered to select the particular courses from the Credit/No-Credit system. For Madison students, all College and Major required courses are excluded from the Credit/No-Credit system. This includes micro and macro-economics, MC 111-112, 201-202 and all Major requirements. It also includes the courses used to fulfill the Foreign Language requirement, but first year-level Russian, Japanese, Chinese, Arabic and African languages may be taken Credit/No credit. For a detailed explanation of Credit/No-credit grading, see MSU's Academic Programs Catalog.
JAMES MADISON COLLEGE FACULTY AND STAFF

ARONOFF, YAEL (Ph.D., Columbia University; Political Science), Assistant Professor, Serling Chair in Israel Studies. She has taught in the Government Department at Hamilton College, was Senior Associate at Columbia University’s Institute of War and Peace Studies, and has served as Assistant for Regional Humanitarian Programs in the Pentagon's Office of Humanitarian and Refugee Affairs and in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee as a Jacob K. Javits Fellow. She has also interned with a variety of international and domestic human rights and refugee non-governmental organizations. Dr. Aronoff is finishing her book manuscript, entitled When Hard-Liners Opt for Peace: The Political Psychology of Israeli Prime Ministers. The project falls under the general heading of the political psychology of war and peace. Her particular focus is on the conditions under which hard-line political leaders become peace makers. It takes as an intellectual target of research opportunity the actions of Israeli prime ministers in the long-standing conflict between Israel and the Palestinians, examining in depth and comparing prime ministers who remained hard-liners (such as Yitzhak Shamir and Benjamin Netanyahu) with those who evolved into peace makers (Yitzhak Rabin and Shimon Peres). Two additional chapters on Ehud Barak and Ariel Sharon bring the project up to date with current developments in the region. Her article, "From Warfare to Withdrawal: The Legacy of Ariel Sharon," is forthcoming in Israel Studies Summer 2010. Her article "From Hawks to Peacemakers: A Comparison of Two Israeli Prime Ministers" was published in Israel Studies Forum 24:1, Summer 2009. Her article, "In Like a Lamb, Out like a Lion: The Political Conversion of Jimmy Carter," was published in Political Science Quarterly 121:3, Fall 2006. The article analyzes the political conversion of Jimmy Carter from dove to hawk in his relations with the Soviet Union, particularly in the wake of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in 1979.

AXELROD, MARK (Ph.D., Duke University; JD, Stanford University), Assistant Professor. Professor Axelrod holds a joint appointment with the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife and works with the STEPPS specialization. His teaching and research interests center around the negotiation and implementation of international law, with a particular focus on environmental agreements. His current research centers around two dynamics. First, one area of research addresses relationships across issue areas in international relations, including statistical tests of institutional change, the "chilling effect" hypothesis (states limit environmental agreements to avoid conflicts with trade law) and the conditions under which Regional Fisheries Management Organizations address climate change. Second, other research assesses how local governance rules affect transboundary ecological outcomes such as poaching, fishing, groundwater use, and electronic waste movements. Mark teaches International Environmental Law and Policy (MC/FW450), Democracy and the Environment (MC 390), Public International Law (MC 362), and Politics of International Economic Relations (MC 221).

BENITEZ, GALIA (Ph.D., Indiana University; Public Policy and Political Science), Assistant Professor. Professor Benitez’s academic interests focus on public policy, public management, international relations and political economy. Based on these interests, she will be able to offer a range of courses in IR, Political Economy, and Latin American topics. One of her published works is entitled A South American Perspective: Regional versus Global Trade Patterns.

BERG, ALLISON (Ph.D., Indiana University; English), Associate Professor. Professor Berg’s research focuses on twentieth-century American literature and culture, with an emphasis on African American literature and on issues of race, gender, class, and sexuality. She has published articles on William Faulkner, Pauline Hopkins, Marita Bonner, the Harlem Renaissance, and contemporary film. Her book Mothering the Race: Women’s Narratives of Reproduction, 1890-1930 (University of Illinois Press, 2002) examines African American and white women’s novels about motherhood in the context of racial uplift, feminist, birth control, and eugenics movements. Her recent publications include: “Integrating Writing and Literature Outside the English Department: African American Literature at a College of Public Affairs” in Integrating Writing and Literature in First-Year English (Modern Language Association, 2007) and "Trauma and Testimony in Black Women's Civil Rights Memoirs" in the Journal of Women's History (Fall 2009). Professor Berg was awarded a University Lilly Teaching Fellowship for 1999-2000. She is the current faculty director of the James Madison Writing Consultancy.

BERGAN, DANIEL (Ph.D., Northwestern University; Political Science), Assistant Professor. From 2005-2007, Professor Bergan was a postdoctoral researcher at Yale University’s Institution for Social and Policy Studies. He joined the faculty of James Madison (with a joint appointment with the Department of Communication) in the fall of 2007. His research interests include a variety of political communication topics, including grassroots lobbying, issue ads, and civic education. He has recently received a grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation to study the effects of issue advertisement in the health care debate, and is currently conducting National Science Foundation-funded research on local public affairs coverage with colleagues in the College of Communication Arts and Sciences. He has published articles in a variety of scholarly journals, including Public Opinion Quarterly, American Politics Research, and Presidential Studies Quarterly.

BLUMBERG, ILANA (Ph.D., University of Pennsylvania, English Literature), Associate Professor. Professor Blumberg's research interests include ethics and economics in nineteenth-century culture, the English novel, contemporary Jewish literature, Hebrew Bible and Midrash, and memoir. Her autobiographical account of growing up Jewish and female, Houses Of Study: A Jewish Woman Among Books, (University of Nebraska Press 2007) was the winner of the 2008 Sami Rohr Prize for Jewish Literature Choice Award and the Runner Up for the 2007 National Jewish Book Award in Women's Studies. Professor Blumberg has also published essays and articles in such journals as Nineteenth-Century Literature, Studies in the Novel, and Michigan Quarterly Review. She is a recipient of fellowships from the American Association of University Women, the National Humanities Center, and the Mellon Foundation. Her second book, "Victorian Sacrifice: Ethics and Economics in Mid-Century Novels" is forthcoming from Ohio State University Press in 2013.

BORCILA, ANDALUNA (Ph.D., Purdue University; American Studies), Associate Professor. Professor Borcila’s current research is in post cold war cultural and literary studies (television, narratives of immigration and return, and travel writing). More generally, her research and teaching are concerned with such issues as the politics of representation and representing “others,” displacement, exclusion from the East/West, the nation, intersection of gender, ethnicity and nationalism, and the role of television as a technology of nationhood. Professor Borcila has published and presented work on the televisual gendering of American identity and on post cold war representations of “Eastern Europe.”
BURNS, GENE (Ph.D., University of Pennsylvania; Sociology), Professor. Professor Burns' research interests include the politics of religion and of secularism, reproductive politics, and social movements. He also teaches social policy and social theory. His book, The Moral Veto: Framing Contraception, Abortion, Contraception and Cultural Pluralism in the United States won the 2006 Distinguished Book Award from the American Sociological Association's Section on Collective Behavior and Social Movements. He is also the author of The Frontiers of Catholicism: The Politics of Ideology in a Liberal World, a New York Times Notable Book of the Year in 1993. His scholarship has also looked at questions such as why American Catholic nuns became very feminist in the late 20th century, why sexuality often becomes the focus of religious politics, and why social movements take the paths they do. In 2004 he was a recipient of the Mid-Michigan Alumni Association Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching. He was awarded a fellowship to the Annenberg Scholars Program at the University of Pennsylvania in 1995-96.

COOK, LISA D. (Ph.D., University of California, Berkeley; Economics), Assistant Professor. Professor Cook's research interests include economic growth and development, economic history, innovation, and financial institutions and markets. Her current research uses new data on women, African American, Soviet, and Russian inventors to understand national and international differences in patenting and commercialization behavior. Dr. Cook is the author of a number of published articles, book chapters, and working papers, and her research has been funded by NSF, the National Bureau of Economic Research, the Economic History Association, and Harvard Business School, among others. Dr. Cook has held positions or conducted postdoctoral research at the National Bureau of Economic Research, the Federal Reserve Banks of New York and Philadelphia, the World Bank, the Treasury Department, the Brookings Institution, the Hoover Institution (Stanford University), Salomon Brothers (now Citigroup), and C&S Bank (now Bank of America). During the 2011-2012 academic year, she was on leave at the President's Council of Economic Advisers and worked on the euro zone, financial instruments, entrepreneurship, and innovation. Professor Cook has a joint appointment with the Economics Department.

CRAIG, TOBIN L. (Ph.D., Boston College; Political Science), Assistant Professor. Professor Craig teaches in both the PTC 0 core curriculum as well as the STEPPS specialization. His teaching and scholarship focus on the philosophic origins of modern science and technology, and the practical and theoretical challenges posed by the advance of modern science and technology.

DORR, RONALD F. (Ph.D., University of Minnesota; American Studies), Professor Emeritus. Professor Dorr has taught English, American literature, and U. S. history at three universities in Bogota, Colombia, American studies at the University of Minnesota, and freshman writing in the Department of Rhetoric at Minnesota. In 1974, Richard Evans and he created the first-year writing sequence, MC 111-113. Now Dorr continues to teach part-time.

His intellectual interests include Abraham Lincoln, autobiographical and biographical writing, literature, religion, and death, grief, and renewal. His essay on Lincoln's letters of condolence won the Midwest Heritage Prize in 1994. His other published work includes a bilingual book on teaching English in Colombia, three chapbooks of poetry, an anthology of 151 reviews of books, plays, and public speeches, and a collection of speeches called SERMONS AND KIN. He has kept a journal for over 50 years. In 2012, he published DEAR ALL, a collection of 68 letters written from Colombia to his family during his first year of teaching in 1962-1963.

He is a recipient of an M. S. U. Teacher-Scholar Award in 1977, an Outstanding Faculty Award from the Senior Class Council in 1988, a State of Michigan Excellence in Teaching Award in 1990, and an M. S. U. Alumni Club of Mid-Michigan Quality in Undergraduate Teaching Award in 1993. His wife is Barbara, a teacher at Lansing Community College, their children Benjamin, Elizabeth, and Jacob, and their grandchildren Samuel, Cooper, and Cecilia.

EDOZIE, RITA K. (Ph.D., Political Science, the New School for Social Research, New York City) is a James Madison College Associate Professor of International Relations, and is the Director of African American and African Studies in the College of Arts and Letters. Edozie's teaching and research interests include African affairs, comparative politics, democratization; transnationalism, and international political economy with a focus on development. She is the author of People Power and Democracy: the popular movement against military despotism in Nigeria, 1989-1999 (2002), Reconstructing the Third Wave of Democracy: Comparative African Democratic Politics (2008) and with Peyi Soyniksa-Airwele, Reframing Contemporary Africa: Politics, Economics and Culture in the Global Era (2009). Additionally, Edozie has contributed scholarly articles and book chapters to several edited volumes and academic journals. Professor Edozie is a Lilly Teaching Fellow (2007-2008) and her Scholarship of Teaching and Learning (SOTL) project focused on interdisciplinary learning and teaching in international relations. Edozie's current research is on the African Union and global governance. She also works on new streams in political thought and discourses in Africana Studies.

EL-RAYES, WASEEM (Ph.D. University of Maryland; Government and Politics), Assistant Professor. Professor El-Rayes' research interests include medieval Arabic and Islamic political philosophy as well as modern political thought in the Muslim world. His dissertation is entitled, "The Political Aspects of Ibn Khaldun's Study of Culture and History".

EMMETT, ROSS B. (Ph.D., University of Manitoba; Economics), Professor. Professor Emmett's research and teaching deal with the central question of comparative economic governance: what is the relationship between basic economic and political institutions and their legal, cultural and social contexts? Dr. Emmett is the lead editor of Research in the History of Economic Thought and Methodology, published in 2 volumes each year. He is the editor and author of the introduction for the new edition of Frank H. Knight's The Economic Organization. Other projects include a book on the future of public higher education in light of the transformative effect of online education, a biography of Frank H. Knight, and co-authoring a book on T. Robert Malthus and modern environmentalism.

GARNETT, SHERMAN W. (Ph.D., University of Michigan; Slavic Languages and Literature), Professor. Dean. Sherman W. Garnett is the Dean of James Madison College at Michigan State University (MSU). James Madison is a four-year residential liberal arts college devoted to the study of public affairs. The College has more than 1200 students and has been widely recognized for its excellence. Though less than four decades since its founding, Madison College has produced five Rhodes Scholars, ten Truman Scholars, eight Marshall Scholars, one George Mitchell Fellow, and eleven Fulbright Fellows. Though less than four percent of the total undergraduate population, Madison College routinely produces more than one-third of the university's annual Phi Beta Kappa class. More than 60% of Madison students study abroad, and more than one-third do their internships outside the United States.

Under Dr. Garnett's leadership, Madison College has expanded its development and alumni activities, more than doubling the number of donors and quadrupling alumni contributions. The College has added new programs in science policy, Muslim Studies, and Comparative Cultures and Politics. It has expanded by 11 faculty members and more than 200 students. Dr. Garnett directed MSU’s special self-study on internationalization for the North Central Association re- accreditation of the university, a process MSU passed with flying colors and much praise for its vision of internationalization past, present, and future. He has worked with Professor Jonas Zoninse in to establish and teach a joint study abroad in Salvador Brazil, bringing together James Madison and other Michigan State students with their counterparts from the Universidade Federal de Bahia [UFBA]. As a result he has served as the point in organizing a broad-based cooperative effort between MSU and UFBA, culminating in an agreement on cooperation in October 2009 and a range of follow-on agreements in hand or under discussion in public health, bioeconomy, and other research exchanges.

Dr. Garnett continues to consult on national security issues, especially those relating to the former USSR, weapons of mass destruction, and defense strategy and arms control. Since coming to MSU, he has been sought out by the National Security Council, the National Intelligence Council, the Foreign Service Institute, the State Department, and the National Defense University. He was one of the project directors of the East-West Institute’s 2001 Bipartisan Task Force on US-Russian Relations. His most recent work has been a project on the options for addressing the crisis in the Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe, leading to a publication in the Brookings Arms Control Papers series. He has lectured at leading universities and institutes in the United States and throughout the world.

From 1994 to 1999, Dr. Garnett was a Senior Associate at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. At the Endowment, he specialized in the foreign and security policies of Russia, Ukraine, and other states of the former USSR. From 1996 to 1999, he served as an adjunct faculty member at Georgetown University, teaching on security issues in the former USSR. He has taught regularly at Madison College, including courses on contemporary security issues, nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction, and issues in political theory and literature.

From 1983 to 1994, Dr. Garnett worked in a variety of positions in the US Government, ending his service as the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Russia, Ukraine and Eurasia. During his nearly ten years in the Office of the Secretary of Defense, Dr. Garnett worked on a wide variety of security and arms control issues. He served as Director for the Offices of Russia, Ukraine and Eurasia (1992-1993) and European Security Negotiations (1989-1992). He was the Secretary of Defense’s Personal Representative to Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe Review Conference in Vienna and the Negotiations on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe (1988-1989). He also worked on issues of chemical and biological weapons arms control as a staff member of the Directorate for Multilateral Negotiations (1984-1988). He was the Senior Representative of the Secretary of Defense to the 1986 Review Conference on the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention, as well as a member of the US delegation to the Negotiations on a Comprehensive Chemical Weapons Ban in Geneva, US-Soviet Talks on Chemical Weapons Non-Proliferation, and special talks on Chemical Weapons Non-Proliferation among leading chemical producing states. Dr. Garnett entered government service in 1983. Upon leaving government service, he received the Defense Department Medal for Distinguished Civilian Service. Dr. Garnett received his Ph.D. in Russian Literature from the University of Michigan in 1982. He has an MA in Russian and East European Studies from Yale University and a BA in Political Philosophy from James Madison College at Michigan State University. He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations.

GOETT, JENNIFER A. (Ph.D. Social Anthropology, University of Texas at Austin), Assistant Professor. Jennifer Goett earned a M.A. in Latin American Studies and a Ph.D. in Cultural Anthropology from the University of Texas at Austin. Her teaching and research interests include race, gender and feminist theory, globalization and transnationalism, nationalism and the state, and Afro-descendant and indigenous politics in Latin America. Dr. Goett has worked with Afro-descendant and indigenous communities in both Nicaragua and Honduras for more than a decade and has acted as a research consultant for the International Human Rights Law Group, the United Nations Development Program, and the World Bank. Her scholarship has been supported by grants from the National Science Foundation, the IIE Fulbright Program, and the Tinker Foundation. She is currently working on a book manuscript that examines the impact of post-revolutionary globalization and multiculturalism on Afro-Nicaraguan Creole identity and activism.

GRAHAM, NORMAN A. (Ph.D., Columbia University; Political Science), Professor. Associate Dean. Acting Dean 1998-99, 2006. Professor Graham’s interests include international security and economic relations, international organization, Western and Southeastern Europe, and Central and South Asia. He has taught at Columbia University and led the Yale University Summer Seminar on International Business. He has also served as a Research Associate with the United Nations, the World Health Organization, and the Futures Group. His publications include eight books. His current research focuses on technology transfer and security in Europe, the external relations of the European Union and economic and political transition in Eastern Europe and Central Asia. He was the recipient of an MSU Teacher-Scholar award in 1993 and also serves as the Director of the Center for European and Russian/Eurasian studies at MSU.

GRANT, JULIA (Ph.D., Boston University; American Studies), Professor, Associate Dean. Professor Grant’s research interests include gender studies, education history and politics, sexual politics, and child and family policy. She has been awarded a University Lilly Teaching Fellowship, a Spencer Postdoctoral Fellowship, the MSU Teacher-Scholar Award, and is a fellow of the CIC Academic Leadership Program. Professor Grant is the author of Raising Baby by the Book: The Education of American Mothers and When Science Encounters the Child: Education, Child Welfare, and Parenting in Twentieth-Century America. Her book, The Origins of the ‘Boy Problem’ in Urban America is due to be published in Winter of 2014.

FREIDUS, ANDREA (Ph.D., Michigan State University; Anthropology), Assistant Professor. Professor Freidus’ publications on sexual relationships between western women and Costa Rican men associated with long-term tourism appear in Qualitative Sociology and Gender, Place and Culture. Her publications on transnational responses to orphans in Malawi appear in the NAPA Bulletin and Children and Society. Her work focuses on transnationalism, development, humanitarianism, global health and medical anthropology with an area focus on southern Africa. Her current project examines the internal brain drain and urbanization of Malawian health care providers as well as the emergence of International Medical Experiences as one response meant to fill the gaps left as a result of this healthcare provider migration.

HUNT, LOUIS D. (Ph.D., Boston College; Political Science), Associate Professor. Professor Hunt earned his Ph.D. in Political Science at Boston College. He was a Fulbright Graduate Fellow at the University of Erfangen in Germany, 1987-1988 and an Olm Fellow in Political Theory, 1995-96. His research interests include Kantian and Hegelian political philosophy, the Scottish Enlightenment and the problems of modern civil society and the relation between Eastern and Western traditions of political thought. Publications include "Civil Society and the Idea of a Commercial Republic," in Michael Schechter, ed., Civil Society in Global and Comparative Perspective, MacMillan/St.Martin's Press, "Principle and Prejudice: Burke, Kant and Habermas on Theory and Practice in Modern Politics," History of Political Thought, and "Hegel's Institutionalist Liberalism: Political Economy and Civil Society in the Philosophy of Right," in Norman G 대해서는 제공된 인터페이스의 한계로 인해 제대로 출력되지 않을 수 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있을 수도 있습니다. 이는 인식이나 언어가 한계를 초월하는 특별한 상황일 수 있음을 염두에 두시기 바랍니다. 적어도 현재로서는 잘 된 것 같습니다. 계속해서 덜어두는 건 잘못된 아웃풋이 될 수도 있었다.

Professor Qing's research and teaching interests include U.S.-China diplomacy, Chinese and U.S. foreign policy, and international relations theory. She was the recipient of Peace Scholar Award from U.S. Institute of Peace, a research institute created by U.S. Congress. She has been a Social Science Research Council/MacArthur Pre-doctoral Fellow at the Sociology Department of Princeton University and a Research Fellow at the Center for International Security and Cooperation at Stanford University. Her publications include: book entitled: FROM ALLIES TO ENEMIES: VISIONS OF MODERNITY, IDENTITY, and U.S.-CHINA DIPLOMACY, 1945-1960 (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 2006), and many articles on the history of U.S.-China relations published in both China and the United States."

RACIOIPPI, LINDA (Ph.D., University of Maryland; Government and Politics), Professor. Professor Racioppi's teaching and research expertise lies at the intersection of comparative politics, international politics, and cultural analysis/studies. In 1991, she was awarded a Lilly Teaching Fellowship; in 1994, she was named MSU Teacher-Scholar; and in 2005, she received the MSU Alumni Club of Mid-Michigan Quality in Undergraduate Teaching Award.

Professor Racioppi is the author of /Soviet Policy Towards South Asia Since 1970/ (Cambridge University Press, 1994), co-author with Professor Katherine O'Sullivan See of /Women's Activism in Contemporary Russia/ (Temple University Press, 1997), and co-editor with See of /Gender Politics in Post-Communist Eurasia/ (Michigan State University Press, 2009). She has edited an occasional paper series on civil-military relations and published articles and book chapters on Soviet arms transfers, women and Russian nationalism, women's organizing in Russia, gender and ethnic conflict in Northern Ireland, conflict resolution, film and international politics, and interdisciplinary pedagogy. Her current research focuses on gender politics and policy in conflict and post-conflict situations and on film, gender and international politics. Her newest project examines the gender politics of development policies and practices in post-disaster contexts, with particular attention to tsunami-affected regions of South Asia.

ROHS, STEPHEN (Ph.D., Michigan State University; American Studies), Associate Professor. Professor Rohs' research includes nineteenth century American culture, especially immigrant performance culture. A second major area of interest is ethnomusicology and the cultivation of musical communities in contemporary society. In 2009, he published _Eccentric Nation_: Irish Performance in Nineteenth-Century New York City_ with Fairleigh Dickinson University Press. He is currently working on a book about musical jam culture and the politics of DIY practices in Michigan.

STEIN-ROGGENBUCK, SUSAN (Ph.D., Michigan State University; American & Women's History), Assistant Professor. Professor Stein-Roggenbuck's research focuses on the history of welfare policy, the rise of professions and the rhetoric of professionalization. Her book, Negotiating Relief: The Development of Social Welfare Programs in Depression-Era Michigan, 1930-1940, was published in 2008 (Ohio State University Press). She has published articles in the Michigan Historical Review and Social Service Review. She was a fellow in the Walter and Pauline Adams Academy for Instructional Excellence and Innovation in 2008-2009. Her current research projects focus on medical care for the poor before Medicaid, and the role of family responsibility in welfare policy.

STOKES, CURTIS (Ph.D., University of Michigan; Political Science), Professor. His research and teaching areas are: black politics in the United States and Michigan; Marxist and radical political thought; and racial inequality in America. Professor Stokes's publications include articles and four books, most recently The State of Black Michigan: 1967-2007 (MSU Press, 2007), co-edited with Joe T. Darden and Richard W. Thomas. He is completing his fifth book, "Race and Human Rights." He is series editor for MSU Press's book series, Black American and Diasporic Studies. Professor Stokes was Assistant Director of African American Studies at Columbia University (1995-97) and Founding Director of the doctoral program in African American and African Studies at MSU (2002-05). He has been the recipient of many awards, including an MSU All-University Excellence in Diversity Award (2001), Co-Director of a Ford Foundation grant (2000-01), and a State of Michigan Teaching Excellence Award (1991).

SYKES, JENNIFER (Ph.D., Harvard University; Sociology & Social Policy), Assistant Professor.

TREMONTE, COLLEEN (Ph.D., Texas Christian University; English), Professor. Dr. Tremonte’s areas of interest include interdisciplinary theory and pedagogy; film, gender, and genre; national cinemas; and, the scholarship of teaching and learning. Tremonte was awarded a University Lilly Teaching Fellowship in 1997-1998, a MSU Teacher-Scholar Award in 1998-1999, and the Mid-Michigan Alumni Club Quality in Undergraduate Teaching Award in 2001. She was also selected a fellow in the Carnegie Academy for the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning (CASTL) in 2000. Tremonte is part of the MSU team to receive a two-year grant from the Council of Graduate Schools on Preparing Future Faculty (PFF) to Assess Student Learning, funded by the Teagle and the Sloane Foundations for 2012-2014.

Professor Tremonte has published in the areas of interdisciplinary teaching and learning, on film and visual rhetorics, and on graduate education. Her most recent publications are “Cartographies: Graduate Education, SOTL, and the Third Space” (2012) and “Window Shopping: Fashioning a Scholarship of Interdisciplinary Teaching and Learning” (2011). She has also has also co-published articles on the cultural politics of James Bond, and is currently working on a book-length study, Darkness Visible: Towards a Poetics of Cinematic Madness.” In 2008, Professor Tremonte began directing the Interdisciplinary Inquiry and Teaching Fellows Program (IIT), a joint initiative between the James Madison College and the MSU Graduate School.

WALTZER, KENNETH A, (Ph.D., Harvard University; History), Professor. Dr. Waltzer's interests are in American social and political history, including urban, immigrant, and minority history, and in modern Jewish history, including the history of anti-Semitism, the Holocaust, and the creation during the 20th century of two new post-Holocaust centers of Jewish life, the U.S. and Israel. He is currently completing a book “Telling the Story: The Rescue of Children and Youths at Buchenwald,” and has lectured in recent years by invitation at the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, the Buchenwald Gedenkstaette, the Melbourne Holocaust Centre, Bergen Belsen Gedenkstaette, and other places (Detroit, Flint, Montreal, Seattle, San Diego, Los Angeles, Boone, NC, and Washington DC). He was in the first group of scholars sponsored by the Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies to enter the newly opened Red Cross International Tracing Service Archives in Bad Arolsen, Germany, in 2008. Based on his research, a Holocaust memoir fraud has since been uncovered, a rescuer of children was honored in 2009 by Yad Vashem, and recently another rescuer has been honored in 2012. He is also working on a second book on children in the camps called “Children’s Stories,” and will deliver the keynote at a conference at Brandeis in October 2013 on “Children and Youths in the Camps.” Professor Waltzer was the historical consultant to Bigfoot Productions in creating the feature documentary, Kinderblock 66-Return to Buchenwald, about rescue in a concentration camp and return 65 years later, which has now won numerous awards. In the future, he would like to write on “Two Centers: The Transformation of Jewish Life in Modernity,” an exploration of how two different Jewish societies were created in the Middle East and in North America by people who (largely, but not completely) share common origins.

Professor Waltzer has won a State of Michigan Teaching Excellence Award (1990), the Mid-Michigan Alumni Club Quality in Undergraduate Teaching Award (1998), and the Outstanding Study Abroad Director Award in the College of Arts and Letters (2001). He was Acting Dean of James Madison College 1990-93; he was Associate Dean 1989-90, 1994-96. He also served as Director of the Center for Integrative Studies in the Arts and Humanities in the College of Arts and Letters. He is currently Director of MSU’s Jewish Studies Program in Arts and Letters. Last year, 2011-12, he was the Myron and Margaret Winegarden Visiting Professor at the UM-Flint; 2013-14 will be his final year before retirement.

ZIERLER, MATTHEW (Ph.D., University of Wisconsin-Madison; Political Science), Associate Professor. Professor Matthew Zierler’s research and teaching interests are in foreign policy, international security, international relations theory, international law, and international cooperation. His dissertation, "Failing to Commit: The Politics of Treaty Nonratification," examined the numerous cases throughout U.S. history when the United States has signed a treaty only to never ratify it. With Professor Mohammed Ayoob, he published "The Unipolar Concert: North-South Divide Trumps Transatlantic Differences" in the spring 2005 issue of the World Policy Journal. With Professor Michael Schechter, he has published "Multilateralism: Does it Still Matter?" in the fall 2005 Information Memorandum published by the Academic Council on the United Nations System (ACUNS). He also has a co-authored article in the January 2011 issue of the Journal of European Integration titled "Barriers to Socialization: Turkey and Regional International Organizations.”
RESOURCES GUIDE:

James Madison College Resources:

Advisors: Madison faculty and academic staff are your FIRST STOP for all questions related to the academic program, course selection and scheduling, choice of major, internship and career opportunities, difficulties in your life that may pose obstacles to academic success, and College and University Resources. You will receive an email from the College informing you of your academic advisor. If you lose this information, please check with the Office of Academic Affairs (369 S. Case) for the name and location of your advisor. You can find the contact information for your advisor by using the MSU Directory (www.search.msu.edu/people).

Field Experience Office: During the sophomore and junior years, students should consult with the Director of Field Experience, and explore the more than 500 placements on file in the Field Experience Office. For more information or to make an appointment see the website at www.jmc.msu.edu/cs/fe.asp Career Services: James Madison has our own Field Consultant to assist Madison Students in the following areas: how to gain work experience, researching careers, finding jobs, career advising, and resume help. See the JMC Career Services website at www.jmc.msu.edu/career for more information or to schedule an appointment.

JMC Writing Consultancy: Peer consultants to help with academic paper critique, resume writing, and general writing skills. The Wring Consultancy is located in room 230 S. Case and their hours are posted on their website: www.jmc.msu/wc

Public Affairs Aide: Upper-level James Madison student who serves as a peer resource to students in MC 201 and MC 202. Office hours will be announced in lectures and section meetings.

JMC Library: provides a library and study space on the third floor of Case

James Madison College Statement on Non-James Madison College Mutual Roommate Requests

1) James Madison College’s first priority is to assign all first-year JMC students to Case Hall.
2) Housing Assignments Office and James Madison College will honor mutual non-Madison roommate requests if space is available in Case Hall.
3) If space for the non-James Madison College roommate is not available in Case Hall then the non-James Madison College student will be assigned to another residence hall, and roommate requests will not be honored.
4) For more information please visit www.LiveOn.msu.edu
5) Room and roommate assignment notifications will be sent in early August by the Housing Assignments Office.
6) James Madison College staff does not have access to housing assignment information.

South Neighborhood Engagement Center

MSU Neighborhoods isn't about just a cluster of residence halls; it's about the students in those residence halls discovering and creating their own communities in a setting that provides innovative, integrated support services, located right where they live and learn.

MSU Neighborhoods are designed to foster academic success, civic and social engagement, health and wellness, and intercultural development. The Engagement Center in each Neighborhood is where students go to find assistance, inspiration, and opportunities.

From everyday questions about college life and course assignments to more complex questions about international engagement and career planning, there's someone in the Neighborhood who can help you find answers.

For more information or to address any questions or concerns, please contact Terry Walsh, South Neighborhood Engagement Director, at walsht@rhs.msu.edu.

You may also visit the website to explore what South Neighborhood has to offer at http://neighborhoods.msu.edu/south

South Neighborhood Resources include:

- Daily Undergraduate University Division (UUD) Academic Advising
- Daily health & wellness services provided by the Olin Health Clinic
- Nightly Writing Center services
- Nightly Math Support tutoring and problem sessions
- Nightly Learning Resource Center (LRC) tutoring for subject-area specific tutoring, as well time-management, test-taking, note taking, and study skills development
- Weekly Computer Help for any of your PC or Mac concerns
- Weekly research support from the Reference Librarian

 The exact days, times, and locations for these services are yet to be determined for the 2012-2013 academic year. Please continue to check the website for updates.
Michigan State University Undergraduate Institutional Learning Goals

Analytical Thinking
The MSU graduate uses ways of knowing from mathematics, natural sciences, social sciences, humanities, and arts to access information and critically analyzes complex materials in order to evaluate evidence, construct reasoned arguments, and communicate inferences and conclusions.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Goal Dimensions</th>
<th>Emerging</th>
<th>Developing</th>
<th>Proficient</th>
<th>Exemplary</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Acquires, analyzes, and evaluates information from multiple sources.</td>
<td>Seeks information from basic types of sources with minimal regard for relevance or quality.</td>
<td>Juxtaposes information from a limited range of sources and identifies biases, strengths, and weaknesses within those sources.</td>
<td>Uses analysis to defend information choices and reach original conclusions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Synthesizes and applies information within and across disciplines.</td>
<td>Recognizes multiple perspectives among sources of information.</td>
<td>Identifies how information can be conceptualized differently within various disciplines.</td>
<td>Examines and integrates relevant information sources from multiple disciplinary perspectives.</td>
<td>Creates defensible, compelling work using multiple disciplinary perspectives.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Identifies and applies appropriate, quantitative methods for defining and responding to problems.</td>
<td>Recognizes the need for and performs basic quantitative methods.</td>
<td>Identifies a range of quantitative methods and employs them to make judgments.</td>
<td>Selects quantitative methods for making sound judgments and drawing plausible conclusions based on the situation.</td>
<td>Critiques biases, strengths, and weaknesses of quantitative approaches to reflect on conclusions and propose responses to a situation.</td>
